MONTGOMERY, Nov. 9, 1915

Hon. Chas. Henderson, Governor
CAPITOL

Dear Sir:

On November 2, 1915, Mr. Adams of this department inspected the jail of Chilton County and found confined therein the following prisoners: six white male, eighteen Negro male, and one Negro female.

All prisoners were in good health with the exception of the Negro woman who appeared to have tuberculosis. Mr. Adams called on Dr. Gragg, County Health Officer, who advised him that he had the case under treatment and was making every effort possible to establish a diagnosis.

The jail was in a clean and satisfactory condition.

On the same date, Mr. Adams visited the alms-house of Chilton County. There were twenty-two inmates: seven white male and fifteen white female.

Conditions generally displayed signs of energy and activity on the part of the keeper, Mr. W. A. Huckabee.

The county appropriates 25 cents per day for the maintenance of the poor and this included their board, clothing, bedding, and medicine.

The institution consists of three houses, namely, two with two rooms and one with four rooms. The inmates of the four-room house complained of its leaking. The keeper informed Mr. Adams that this fact had been reported to the commissioners a number of times but no steps had been taken in the way of repairs.

The crowded condition of this alms-house warrants the erection of another building for the white inmates and some provision should be made for the Negroes.

Respectfully submitted,

W. H. Oates

State Prison Inspector
