MOBILE.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 26, 1821.

A communication signed "Hogarth," has been received, headed "high life below stairs; or, a peep at the manners, customs & habits of Mobile." The beauty of the composition, the great talent of the author, as well as the extensive knowledge of human nature, and of individual characters displayed, ought to insure its publication. We are, however, restrained by two considerations.—Hogarth, like his great namesake, is too pointed in his allusions, and some characters are drawn with such admirable tact, that every child will point out the original, whether male or female.—We have also established as a rule not to insert any communication unless the author makes himself known to us.—Hogarth is therefore most earnestly solicited to an interview previous to Tuesday next. We hardly think it necessary to add that inviolable secrecy may be depended on.

An essay signed "A Creole," was received too late for this day's paper—It shall appear in our next

COMMUNICATED.

Fellow Citizens,

We have three gentlemen proposed to us for Major of the Mobile Battalion of Militia. The friends of the candidates intend supporting the man of their choice. Two of the gentlemen proposed are already captains in the battalion, the other is a private citizen. How far the principle may be permitted to extend of dropping two officers already in commission, in favor of a third person, is a question that deserves our particular attention. For myself, I should say, that such overslawing is rather unmilitary—let the young subaltern officer, who, in a subaltern situation has answered the highest expectations of his fellow citizens, be the man of our choice—let the meritorious Ensign follow in regular gradation, the lieut. when promoted—the lieut. the captain, and the captain the major. Now instead of this regular plan, I should not like to see a private citizen take a running jump at promotion, and without touching the three lower rungs of the ladder light at once upon the fourth.—The attempt, I conceive, would show more agility than wisdom.

CÆSARIO.

SAVANNAH, Jan. 6.

THE FLORIDA TREATY RATIFIED, AND ACQUITAL OF THE QUEEN.

By the fast sailing ship Georgia, capt. Field, in the short passage of four days from New-York, we have received the Mercantile Advertiser, to the 30th ult. which contains the following important intelligence:

NEW-YORK, December 30.

LATEST FROM EUROPE.

The fine fast sailing ship Hector, capt. Bennett, arrived at this port yesterday afternoon from Liverpool, whence she sailed on the 18th ult. The editors of the Mercantile Advertiser have received by this arrival London papers to the 17th November inclusive, & Lloyd's Lists of the 10th, 14th and 17th of that month. These papers furnish many articles of considerable interest. We have copied the most prominent.

Don Manuel De Barros, attached to the Spanish legation to the United States, arrived at the house of the Spanish consul in Bordeaux on the 30th of October, with the treaty for the CESSION OF THE FLORIDAS, which had been ratified by the Cortes. A letter from Bordeaux, received at Paris on the 7th November, says he will embark immediately, in the ship Rapid, of New-York, for Philadelphia.

The proceedings against the Queen have terminated in the House of Lords. It being ascertained on the 10th, that there would be only a majority of 9 for the bill on the third reading, a motion was made by Lord Liverpool to postpone taking the question to that day six months, which was carried . This is considered in England as an abandonment of the prosecution, and great rejoicings had taken place in consequence, throughout England. London was illuminated three successive nights, in a very brilliant manner, the windows exhibiting transparences and placards inscribed "The Queen Triumphant."—Some riots took place in the course of these demonstrations of joy, and the windows of two newspaper offices were demolished. Lord Liverpool, it is said, was about to resign.

CASE OF THE QUEEN

The question on the second reading of the bill against the queen, was taken on the 6th November, when it appeared there were contents 123—non-contents 95—majority 28. On the following day the debate on the third reading was commenced, which was continued till the 10th. The house then divided—when there appeared for the third reading 108, against it 99, leaving a majority of only 9 in favor of the bill.

As soon as the state of the division was announced; lord Dacre rose, and holding a paper in his hand, said he had been intrusted with a petition from her majesty, praying to be heard by counsel against the passing of the bill. Lord Liverpool said, that he apprehended such a course would be rendered unnecessary by what he was about to state. He could not be ignorant of the state of public feelings with regard to this measure, and it appeared to be the opinion of the house that the bill should be read a third time only by a majority of nine votes. Had the third reading been carried by as considerable a number of peers as the second, he and his colleagues would have felt it their duty to persevere with the bill, aud to send it down to the other branch of the legislature. In the present state of the country, however, and with the division of sentiment, so nearly balanced, just evinced by their lordships, they had come to the determination not to proceed further with it He should accordingly move that the question that the bill do pass be put on this day six months.—(The most vehement cheering took place on this unexpected declaration.) Earl Gray rose as soon as the Earl of Liverpool had resumed his seat, but the confusion did not subside until after his lordship had been for some time on his legs. His Lordship complained of the whole course ministers had pursued with regard to the bill, which, after the declaration of the noble earl, could scarcely be said to be before the house, but which was still before the country, and would long live in its memory. He charged the servants of the crown with the grossest neglect of duty, in the first instance, in listening only to an ex parte evidence, and giving a willing credence to the most exaggerated and unfounded calumnies.

They had thus, for many months, agitated the nation; they had produced a general stagnation of public and private business; and they had given a most favorable opportunity, were it desired, to the enemies of internal peace and trenquility. They had betrayed their King, insulted their Queen (continued cries of hear from all sides,) and had given a shock to the morals of society by the promulgation of the detestable and disgusting evidence, in the hearing of which the house had been so long occupied. Hear. His lordship also reprobated, in the severest terms, the conduct of the Milan commissioners, who, having been appointed, not to investigate the truth, but to obtain testimony of guilt, had found in this country but too great an inclination to put faith in all the stories their agents and witnesses might invent against the honor and reputation of the Queen of Great Britain. The result has been, that after inquiries, secret and open; after the greatest calumnies and the foulest libels had been made the subject of detail and debate for fifty days, after all the injury that it was possible to do the Queen had been accomplished, the bill was abandoned, not without reason, but assuredly without apology. His lordship concluded by assuring some noble lords on the other side that the people of Great Britain would not be satisfied with the mere withdrawing of the measure, but would demand a strict inquiry into its foundation and origin. Great applause. Lord Erskine addressed a few words to their lordships in a manner truly emphatic and striking: "I have heard, (said he) the proposal of the noble earl: I see the fate of this odious measure: on [illegible] nated and I feel nothing but the most lively and entire satisfaction. I heartily rejoice in this event. My Lords, I am an old man and my life, whether it have been for good or for evil, has been passed under the sacred rule of the law. In this moment I feel my strength renovated and repaired, by that rule being restored—the accursed charge wherewithal we have been menaced has passed over our heads; there is an end of that horrid and portentous excresence of a new law retrospective, iniquitous, and oppressive; and the scheme of our polity is once more safe. My heart is too full of the escape we have just had to let me do moee than praise the blessings of the system we have regained, but I cannot praise them adequately myself, and I prefer expressing my own sentiments in the fine language of one of the most eloquent authors of any age, Hooker, who thus speaks in his great work, his Ecclesiastical Polity:—Of law there can be no less acknowledged than that her seat is the bosom of God; her voice the harmony of the world; all things in heaven and earth do her homage; the very least as feeling her care, and the greatest as not exempted from her power. Both angels and men, and creatures of what condition soever, though each in different sort and manner, yet all with uniform consent, admiring her as the mother of their peace and joy." The Duke of Montrose said, he should oppose the motion for throwing out the bill.—The motion was then put and agreed to, and the house adjourned to the 23d inst. the day on which the commons meet.

A guard room for an officer and 50 men has been erected round the King's cottage at Windsor.

NEW-ORLEANS, Nov. 30.

The present population of the parish of Feliciana, is 12,732, It has 115 cotton gins which last year ginned 9000 bales of cotton.

NEW-YORK, Dec. 26.

BELOW—The United States' Sloop of War CYANE, capt. Trenchard, from a cruize on the coast of Africa—and 52 days from Sierra Leone, whence she sailed the 27th of October. Two of the officers came up this morning in a pilot-boat, from whom we have obtained the following particulars:—The U. S. ship John Adams, had arrived on the Coast, delivered her orders, and sailed from Cape Sierra Leone on the 18th Oct. for Rio Pongas, in company with the British brig of war Snapper, to cut off an American sixteen gun slave-vessel, which, it was understood was in that quarter.

We also learn, that the remainder of the colony of blacks was in a very disaffected state.—Several officers by the Cyane had been on shore and taken a particular account of their situation to report to government. The officers and crew of the Cyane are in good health.

AN EXTRACT.

What are the conflicting interests of this vast confederation?" Is the interest of the North distinct from that of the South? There is not a spear of rice, or wheat, or tobacco, or a plant of cotton, that springs on the remotest part of the Southern Territory, that does not contribute to the support of the Northern merchant, mechanic, manufacturer and farmer. There is not a ship that sails from a Northern port, which does not directly, or indirectly, carry wealth to the Southern planter The God of nature, if we regard only the geographical situation of our country, and the productions of its soil, and consider man as the mere creature of sordid interest, seems to have ordained the mighty republic to be forever one and indivisible. No part of the habitable globe is more intimately, more indissolubly connected. It is impossible that one part should long exist without the other.—As to "conflicting interests" we know not where to find them, our interests are the same; our population the same; our language the same. Sprung from one common stock, we are bound together by every tie of endearment that can operate on a people. Who is the man that would sow discord among us?

CONGRESS.

Thursday, December 14.

IN THE HOUSE—The following letter from the Secretary of War was received and read:

War Department, December 14, 1820.

Sir—In answer to that part of the resolution of the House of Representatives of the 9th inst. requiring this department to show whether the order given by colonel King, of the 4th infantry, for shooting deserters taken in the act, was approved by any general officer in the service of the United States, or was known to, or passed over in silence by him, as stated in the defence of said col. King, I have to enclose an extract of the letter of Major General Jackson, on that subject, which was transmitted to the House of Representatives with the copy of the trial of Colonel King, and which is published in the appendix of that trial. This extract contains all the information within the knowledge of this department on that subject.

In relation to that part of the resolution which requires any information this department may possess, showing that corporal punishment has been inflicted on any soldier, whereby he came to his death, I have the honor to state, that the only report of that kind which has reached this department, was the case of a soldier at Fort Preble, near Portland, in Maine. Major Brooks, a correct and intelligent officer commanding that post, in September last, reported that the death of a soldier, an habitual drunkard, who had been on a fatigue party, under lieut. Hobart, and had been confined by him, had caused much excitement among the citizens, who attributed the death of the man to the conduct of lieutenant Hobart:—that the civil authority had taken up the affair for investigation, to which lieut. Hobart had readily submitted himself. The report was accompanied with the enclosed certificate of the jury of inquest as to the correct conduct of major Brooks and the other offi ers of the post, in relation to the transaction, it thus appearing that the affair would undergo an investigation in the District Court of the United States, the department did not think it proper to order a military investigation.

I have the honor to be, with perfect respect, your obedient servant,

J. C. CALHOUN.

To the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Coroner's Report.—A Coroner's Inquest was held at Cahawba, on Sunday last over the body of Elizabeth Bell, who was found dead in her bed. Verdict of the Jury was, "She came to her death from intoxication by spirituous liquors, and the effects of extreme cold."

Alabama Watchman.

With great delight indeed we view the exertions of the Rev. Cyrus Kinsbury, to civilize the Choctaw Indians. In July last he writes thus:

"We lately had a very interesting visit from some of the head chiefs. They were highly pleased with the school, and with all the arrangements of the mission. After hearing a statement of the expenses, and what the white people had done for it, they voted to give 2000 dollars per annum for 16 years to the school at Elliot, to commence with the year 1821. They have also put at our disposal, for the establishment of two other schools, 3000 dollars per annum, for 17 years; making an aggregate of near 100,000 dollars for the purposes of education, given freely, almost unanimously, by an ignorant and savage people.—Surely we must say, what hath God wrought? We are constrained to believe the Lord has good in store for this people."

In a letter from Elliot, dated May 28, Mr. Kinsbury says:

"The Lord is opening a wide and effectual door for useful labours among this people. Our school consists of sixty-eight promising children, of whom 17 are females: only one has left the school, and many are anxious to join it, if they can be received. Two more schools are urgently desired, and large appropriations made for them in cash by the natives. One is already commenced but we have neither help, nor sufficient means to carry it forward, with that expidition which the case demands. It pains our hearts to view the wretched condition of this people—to see them looking to us for instruction, while we are utterly unable to supply their wants or meet their expectations. But in view of what God has done, we cannot for a moment doubt, but that he will raise up the men, and provide the means for diffusing the gospel and civilization over this dark land. We trust there are some serious impressions on the minds of some of our dear children, and that some others are enquiring what they must do to be saved."

Anecdote of an Indian Girl, extracted from the journal of the Choctaw Mission:

"Nov. 19.—This morning the Indians are preparing to move on their journey. A sprightly half-breed girl, about thirteen earnestly requested that she might be received into the school. When we told her that we could take no more than we had, and some who were engaged, she wept much. Her friends, to pacify her, told her that she had no suitable clothes, and therefore could not stay. She replied, that she had one cow, which her father had given her, and she would sell that and get some, if we would take her. Her entreaties affected our hearts. We had already enlarged our school beyond our means of support: our friends' help was feeble, and we had resolved to take no more scholars: but when we see children so anxious to come, where they can receive an education, and enjoy instruction, we believe the lord will enable us to provide for them. We resolved to take the girl, and to keep her till we were under the necessity of sending her home. Her uncle, a half-breed, said we might charge to him the clothes and blankets we got for her, and he would pay for them. Friends of man and the redeemer! have you no bowels of mercies for this people? Will you hear them plead for help, and not help them?"

Public Sale

OF LOTS

IN THE CITY OF MOBILE,

ON the first Monday of April 1821, will be offered for sale, several squares containing about ONE HUNDRED Lots in the city of Mobile.

The lots now offered for sale embrace the scite of Fort Charlotte, &c—were lately surveyed according to the plan of the Old Town, and were purchased from the United States, at the public sale on the 14th Dec. 1820, by a number of individuals, under an agreement of having the whole resurveyed and laid off conformably to the present plan of the city, & resold for the benefit of the proprietors.—The advantages offered in the purchase of lots in the city of Mobile, whether for the purpose of improvement or active employment of money, may justly be said to be very great, and that Mobile must become the only important commercial sea port for this section of the country; the extensive back country to be supplied, and the quantity of produce shipped, are a sufficient security to warrant the investment of funds in the purchase of Lots in this place. The situation of the lots is elevated, and have a front on the water of about 120 feet, upon which a wharf and other improvements are now commencing.

TERMS OF SALE.

A Proclamation.

By the grace of Mercury the messenger of Homer's deities, and inventor of the Razor-strap, I CHARLES BROWN legitimate successor of the renowned, and far-famed De Randemay do, hereby make known that I have transferred the seat of Empire to my good city of Mobile; where on Royal street, opposite the U. States Hotel, I have fixed my imperial residence, designated by that royal ensign, emblem of imperial authority, vulgarly called a barber's pole, where I am determined, hereafter, to hold my imperial levees, and to receive all my leige subjects in the most gracious manner, by a dexterous application of my digits to their beardy honors so graceful to the human face divine: and to merit a continuance of my peoples patronage, no royal favor, or talent shall be wanted, in puting with a barbers skill, the heads of the fashionables, into chaotic order, and in confering thereon as much perfect-ability as is consistent with the state of the internal organs.

And for the further consolation of my loving subjects, be it, moreover, known that, by the help of able negociators, I have made such transatlantic arrangements with my brethren, the Emperors, Kings, and Potentates of the puff-ball, and aromatic soap-brush, as to receive regularly from London, St. Petersburg, and Paris, the latest modes exhibiting the various grades of fashion from the TON KALON of female elegance down to the Haut-ton and aerial style of Paris.

CHARLES BROWN,
Emperor of the Barbers race & tonsor
General of Mobile, & its dependences.

Jan. 19.

N. B.—There are some understrappers of my Barber's Majesty, who have taken to themselves titles to which they are not heirs apparent, however, I am advised by my sapient council of state, to let them continue their barber-ous operations so long as they remain capable of wielding the razor without snedding innocent blood.

BLACKWOOD'S

EDINBURGH MAGAZINE,

FROM THE EDINBURGH EDITION.

IN announcing their intention of republishing the above work in the United States, the publishers can only express their surprise that some bookseller of extensive connexions has not long ago occupied the ground. The reasons no doubt may be found in the general depression of trade, and the difficulty of collecting small sums through a widely scattered population; still, that a work of such decided talent, and various literature, should have reached its thirtieth number without an edition being demanded, argues at least that its great merit is known but to a very few, or that the previous fate of periodical works in our country has operated effectually against the undertaking.

Notwithstanding the foregoing considerations, the publishers have determined to solicit public patronage. If successful, they will endeavor to show, by the manner in which the mechanical part shall be executed, that they have deserved it; if not, they shall quit their object with regret, that so distinguished a production should remain unknown to the mass of their countrymen. They trust, however, that by perseverance their end will be obtained, and on that ground they make the attempt.

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE may be considered as having commenced a new era in miscellaneous periodical literature.—The criticism is in general candid, bold and independant. Against the partial and almost malignant criticism of the northern reviewers it has more than once entered its solemn protest. Indeed it seems almost the only work which has had the power of disturbing the repose, and of exciting the anxiety of those self erected literary empires. It is evident that they frequently wrythe under the severity of its sarcasm, and that in future they must not expect to inflict wounds upon inoffending talent and virtuous principle with impunity. It is at once the friend of unassuming genius, and the intrepid friend of high acquirement; yet it treats with virtuous indignation those who, with talent of the first order, devote them to the basest of purposes.

The essays and other communications in this work, are upon the most interesting subjects. They exhibit deep thought, extensive research, and no ordinary degree of learning. Their purity of style, and dominion over our language, are equal to any production of the age.—There is scarcely a subject of any importance which is not touched with a master's hand. Their knowledge of the literary circle which directs and controls the metropolis of Scotland is as accurate as it is universal; nor can any similar work be pointed to, from which so much can be learned, on the various subjects of literature, morals, and the habits of intellectual society, as BLACKWOOD'S EDINBURGH MAGAZINE.

CONDITIONS.

The Work, which will contain between fourteen and fifteen hundred large octavo pages, making two heavy volumes a year, will be printed page for page with the Edinburgh edition, on fine paper, with an entire new type, and delivered to subscribers at Eight Dollars per annum, payable on the delivery of No. 6.

PROPOSALS

BY HENRY HITCHCOCK,

FOR PUBLISHING, BY SUBSCRIPTION, THE

ALABAMA JUSTICE OF THE PEACE,

Containing a Digest of all the common and statuary Laws appertaining to that office, in the State of Alabama. To which is added, A great variety of Warrants, Bonds, Recognisances, and other Precedents, interspersed under their several heads.

The utility of a compilation of the Laws relating to the duties of the various subordinate officers of this state, is too apparent to require illustration.

We have no work of the kind; and the little benefit to be derived from the Statutes of the State, is denied to magistrates, from the very mall number which is in circulation.

To supply this deficiency, and to present in a volume of convenient size the various and important duties of Justices of the Peace, Sheriffs, Coroners, Constables, &c. with the forms necessary to enable them to discharge those duties, is the object of the publication now proposed.—It will also contain much matter relating to contracts, which will be useful to private gentlemen

CONDITIONS.—The volume will contain about 500 pages octavo; and will be published, and furnished to subscribers, bound in boards, at $5 a volume, as soon after the close of the session of the next legislature as practicable.

N. B. Subscriptions for the above work received at this office.

PROPOSALS

FOR PUBLISHING A NEWSPAPER, TO BE ENTITLED

The Montgomery Republican.

AWARE that my new and difficult employment will subject me to many inconveniences, arising from want of experience, it is with diffidence I announce myself as being about to undertake (in addition to other engagements) the arduous task of superintending the editorial department of a paper. I, however, trust, that my News arrangements will be such as will enable me to present the citizens of Alabama with a journal not entirely uninteresting to them, while my exertions in procuring facts in relation to that state and other subjects, aided by some literary friends will render it not altogether unacceptable to others.

I must, on this occasion, be permitted to depart from the general custom of giving laborious details of the advantages resulting from newspaper publications, and of making specious promises; the one being already sufficiently understood, and the other calculated to deceive. I offer neither; merely remarking that its name proclaims its principles, and that my humble efforts will be freely exercised in endeavoring to promote the usefulness of the paper, and interests of the people.

It may not be amiss to give to those unacquainted, a short sketch of the place whence the paper is to be issued.

MONTGOMERY, formerly called HOSTILE BLUFF, lately East Alabama, and New Philadelphia, (the former established by a company in Georgia, and the latter by A. Dexter esq. both having been incorporated into one town by the last legislature) is situated in the healthy, fertile and thickly settled county of the same name, of which it is the seat of justice—intended to perpetuate two distinguished martyrs* to the cause of the republic, directly opposite to the eastern point of that highly cultivated, extensive and fertile tract of land, known by the name of the "Big Bend." It adjoins the fraction on which the town of Alabama stands, and bordering on the celebrated river of that name, to which it is navigable at all seasons of the year from the Gulf of Mexico, for steam boats of a large class, distant about two hundred miles from Milledgeville; a similar distance from the sea ports of Mobile and Blakeley; about fifty-five miles above Cahawba, the seat of government; and about twelve miles below the junction of the Coosa and Talapoosa. It is the point at which the Atlantic mails reach their first stopping place in the state, and from whence news may be distributed thro' the country with great facilities. Montgomery, from its high and airy situation, the purity of the waters, flowing from its several springs, and the elevation of the banks along the river on both sides, which exclude stagnant waters, is considered peculiarly healthy; indeed, many resort to that place during the summer months, on that account. It contains many romantic as well as level sites for building, and for an infant establishment, it may be called a pleasant, flourishing town.

J. BATTELLE.

Savannah, 17th July, 1820.

* The county was named in honor of the gallant major Montgomery, who fell at the Horseshoe, and the town derived its title from the immortal general who shared the same fate at Quebec at an early period of the revolutionary war.

FOR PUBLISHING BY SUBSCRIPTION, IN THE CITY OF BALTIMORE,

BY WM. OGDEN NILES,

A PERIODICAL WORK, TO BE ENTITLED,

THE DOMESTIC ECONOMIST,

To be devoted exclusively to Manufacturing Industry and Poetical Economy, with Statistical Facts and Remarks.

My Father, the Editor of the WEEKLY REGISTER, has for nearly two years past contemplated the establishment of a work on the principles about to be submitted to you, but owing to the great attention it demanded to conduct his own extensive establishment, he has not been able to accomplish it, and has therefore committed to me his views of the subject, with a promise to assist me at all times with his council in matters of dubious import. Thus aided, every exertion dependent on industry and application, shall be made to merit the patronage solicited.

"The DOMESTIC ECONOMIST" will have for its bject, a record o the many fugitive pieces in favor of domestic industry, which now appear in the newspapers of the day, and original communications relating thereto, a history of the arts, and essays to excite emulation in them, an account of new machinery and improvements—the encouragement of labour, as the true source of honest wealth, and efforts to make the same respected—statistical articles bearing upon the products of industry—and applied to the arts, manufactures and resources of the country—notices of men eminently useful as inventors, and of things by which the progress of industry may be facilitated in its road to perfection, with remarks on the home market, and to show the general necessity of a dependence upon ourselves for the supply of our own wants.

When we reflect for a moment on the immense sums vested in the manufacturing establishments of the United States, and the numerous population that is maintained thereby, with their visible want of support, it will appear surprising, that no work of the kind now proposed, has been offered to the people: whether it was owing to an apathy existing in the public mind, or a want of energy in those who may have contemplated it, cannot be determined, but we feel confident from a change in the public feeling, that it is now required, and the most lively hopes are entertained of its success.

CONDITIONS.—The "Economist" will be published in Baltimore, every Wednesday, on a sheet of fine medium paper, octavo, and with a handsome type, so as to form two neat volumes in a year, for which the proper title pages and indexes shall be gratuitously furnished, at three dollars per annum, payable in advance.

As soon as one thousand subscribers are obtained the work will be put to press, and two or three numbers published as a specimen of its manner. It will then be suspended for a short time to give the public an opportunity of judging of its merits, and those only will be considered subscribers who remit payment for it in advance. The amount is so small, that any other way of collecting the price of the work, would consume its expected profits:—and should it not succeed, the advance shall faithfully be remitted. All the subscriber promises is this, that he will do the best that he can to make labour respected, and to ensure to the labourer his just reward, an honourable independence. He is about entering on the theatre of busy life, and hopes that his first essay will be received with indulgence as an offering to do good.

Subscriptions are solicited.

Respectfully,

WM. OGDEN NILES.

BALTIMORE, January 1, 1820.

AN ORIGINAL WORK, TO BE ENTITLED

SKETCHES OF

THE LIFE AND CHARACTER OF

STEPHEN DECATUR,

Commodore and Post Captain

IN THE NAVY OF THE UNITED STATES,

AND NAVY COMMISSIONER.

Interspersed with Notices of the Origin, Progress, Achievements, and present State of the American Navy.

BY S. PUTNAM WALDO, ESQ.

Compiler of 'Robins' Journl,' author of 'President's Tour,' and 'Memoirs of Jackson.'

STEPHEN DECATUR'S name and glory are so perfectly identified with that of the AMERICAN NAVY, that we cannot reflect upon the renown of the latter, without blending with it the gallant achievements of the former. He was an early and favorite Pupil of the immortalized PREBLE, who may as emphatically be called the Preceptor of the American Navy, as the venerable JOHN ADAMS has been pronounced its Father.

Whether we consider Decatur as a youthful champion, boarding a Corsair and slaying its commander, who had treacherously slain his brother—as an intrepid officer, destroying an enemy's frigate under the guns of a fortress deemed by the Turks impregnable—as a commander undauntedly meeting and capturing the floating bulwarks of Britain—as the Commodore of a squadron, conquering a Barbary power, and compelling it to sue for peace—or as an accomplished officer at the seat of government, assisting in giving perfection and power to the Navy of our republic—In each of these capacities, his character equally excites our admiration. The object of this work is to enable the reader to trace the progress of this hero, the pride and boast of our country, from the first dawnings of his greatness, to the meridian splendor of his glory. The materials from which the work will be prepared are of unquestionable authenticity—and the volume will not be swelled with matter unconnected with the Life, Character, and achievements of DECATUR, and the origin, progress, and present state of the American Navy.

TERMS.

1. The work will consist of a large duodecimo volume, from 300 to 350 pages, with an accurate and elegant Portrait of Decatur.

2. The price to subscribers will be one dollar a volume—to non-subscribers, one dollar and thirty-four cents.

3. For every ten copies taken and paid for, an eleventh will be delivered to the agent or person taking them, gratis.

☞ Editors of Newspapers who feel interested in this publication, and will give these Proposals a few insertions, shall have a copy of the work and the thanks of the publisher presented to them.

Hartford, April 1820.

The Republic.

IT is proposed to publish a newspaper in the town of Baton Rouge, State of Louisiana, on paper of the size of the National Intelligencer, under the title of "THE REPUBLIC.",

Perhaps it would be difficult to name an epoch in the annals of political economy when the task of Editors of Newspapers have been more complicated than the present; the "fluctuations and vast concerns" that now agitate the world, where so much is done and doing that is not only strange, but great, call for much at their hands, as judicious selectors.

Our attempts are not to do great things, but to let it be known that great things are doing; for science, like money, is of little or no use to the world except when disseminated; and it may be a question, which is of the most real use to mankind, the coiner or the merchant in one, or the writer and the periodical transcriber in the other; To the former we have none, to the latter but small pretensions.

To edit a newspaper well, is no small performance; to say that the editors are but transcribers, or copyists, is to say but little; it is acknowledged on all hands, that the stupendous genius of Shakespeare was inimitable in describing and delineating human life and manners; but is there no talent or sagacity needed to discover and select his happiest passages? Fenelon makes his Telemachus say, that, to discern and make choice of the most proper books to read is the province of a capacious mind.

The face of a newspaper, like the face of nature, is rendered pleasing from variety, as in a happily diversified garden, while regaled with fruits and esculent, that nourish & cure, the eye is delighted and the imagination expanded while viewing its beauties, so, in the colums of a newspaper, we turn with pleasure from the drudgery of a lengthy debate in Congress-hall to some brilliant rant of Anacreon Moore, and from the unsuccessful efforts of the depressed Spaniards to the cutting sarcasm of Peter Pindar, or the winding wit of our own Franklin.

While the dispositions of mankind are so various, and while pleasure is the real or ostensible object sought for by the reader, it will signify little for a newspaper to contain much that is sentimental and important, if it contains nothing to please; therefore, it is our object, so far as is consistent with our principles, to please all, as well those who laugh or talk as those who preach or pray; and since to err is consistent with human nature, we invite all to read, hope that none will too hastily condemn, congratulate those who may be pleased, and are happy with such as perchance may be usefully instructed.

To abstain entirely from political discussions, if it were possible, would be improper; and, if it were proper, would, in a free country like our, be next to impossible. It matters not to us of what party a man may belong; if the measures proposed by him are best calculated for the public welwafe, they ought to be supported and adopted; MEASURES, not men, shall be OUR criterion. WE are in flexible Republicans—but THIS PRESS will never be devoted to any political party.

We are in favor of the rights of suffrage, indiscriminately extended to all citizens who pay any kind of tax, and perform military duty. The poor man's liberty is, at least, as dear to him as silver and gold are to the rich; and it is no more than just that he who is generally first called on, in the hour of danger, to shoulder his musket, should participate equally with other citizens all the blessings & all the rights of freemen.

We are friends to the liberty of the press; because we believe it to be the palladium of our liberty. We know that the liberty of the press may sometimes degenerate into licentiousness; but, to enjoy the invaluable blessings incident to the freedom of discussion, we are willing to suffer a portion of the evils sometimes arising from the licentiousness of the press. There is no good which has not its concommitant evil; and we shall enjoy very few rights indeed, if we will share none which are liable to abuse.

We are friends to the people—the true source of power in a republic. We believe in their sovereignty; that they have at all times a right to alter their government; that they are able to govern themselves, and that to them all public officers must render an account of their stewardships. If the people do sometimes err, we believe their errors unintentional. And who is perfect? The voice of the people legally expressed must be obeyed; a majority must rule, or there is an end of a Republican Government.

The Republic will watch with an anxious eye over the libety and prosperity of the inhabitants of the United States generally; disseminate, as much as possible, correct political knowledge; guard them against the machinations of foreign and domestic foes; and to strengthen the bonds of friendship between the French and American population of Louisiana, will be one of its first and principal objects.

Under the title of the Republic will appear all information of a national or general nature; a relation of the great events which may transpire in Europe, and other remote quarters of the globe; and, whatever concerns the welfare, or endangers the repose of the U. States. For the information of the citizens of the Atlantic states, will appear, also, the most correct historical and geographical sketches of the state of Louisiana; and other parts of the southern and south western country. To this purpose, one column at least, every week, will be appropriated, as matter may be collected; describing the face of the country in different parts, climate, soil, mineral, and vegetable productions; artificial mounds and other evidences of a vast ancient population, and scientific improvements; together with the origin and progress of modern settlements; the present state of learning, and the useful arts.

Strict attention will be paid to an early publication of all laws which may be passed by the Legislature of Louisiana, regulating the entries and taxation of the lands of non-residents. And also regular lists of all lands sold for taxes, from time to time, in the several parishes. Also a synopsis of the proceedings of the Legislature.

The Editors will use every exertion to render their paper a vehicle of extensive information, rather than general animadversion. To this end, arrangements are making to collect from every quarter the most correct and early information on all interesting subjects, whether foreign or domestic; and the same to lay before their patrons and the public, as speedily as possible.

It is the intention of the Editors to receive and publish all such statements and strictures relative to political characters and political measures as shall have the appearance of truth and importance, when supported by fair argument, and dressed in decent language; of which they will exercise the right of judging; leaving it to their readers to form their own opinions, from the facts submitted. But all unnecessary personalities will be carefully avoided in the Editorial Department, as being ultimately dangerous to the freedom of the press.

To these professions the Editors are determined to adhere. Yet, they will always act on the defensive; and if unreasonably attacked, they will not spare their antagonist, nor refuse to extend the war even in the enemy's country, if practicable.

THE EDITORS.

CONDITIONS.

The REPUBLIC will be published in the French and English languages, twice a week during the session of the Legislature of this state—and regularly once a week, during the remainder of the year

The first number will appear on the 22d day of February next, (the birth-day of Washington,) provided 400 subscribers are obtained by that time.

The price to subscribers will be six dollars per annum, payable in advance—or eight dollars if not paid till the expiation of the year.

No subscriber will be received for less than six months; and advertisements will be inserted at the customary prices of the state.
