Dear Sir Pikeville Monroe Cty ala 22 Dec 1840

Last winter I had written you relative to the mention of my name for an appointment in the anticipated land office in the Cherokee counties, and mentioned, although I supported White, as the result of my honest & independent conviction, yet, as every good citizen should, I bowed to the will of the nation, Had and may still incline, to support the measures of Mr. Van Buren, so far, as my judgement become satisfied, they were good and safe for the nation, more, I would not do. if White or anyone else was president, Well Sir, the president recommended the Bankrupting our State Banks, and said it was clearly constitutional, see message of 37- Congress passed over it, I thot that measure dead, It only slept, Last Congress it was resuscitated. By Benton again at the present. That Bill into law, does it not place every Bank in the U, States at the feet & in the presidents power. Such had been the course of things, the Banks, the government and the issues of Treasury notes, I thot an experiment of the sub treasury might be ventured, But when I come # to search Coolly and (as I think) deeper into the operation # of the measure, The power it creates, increases, and gives to the president, with the increase of temptation, to so many, holding the Keys over the public money, and all those, dependent on, and too many, subservient to, the creative & dissipating power, I think the measure most happily calculated, well to destroy, the liberties of any country,

The army Bill, tho recommended by the president, so important to All America, tho never seen, stop me short, I cannot advocate the elevation of no man, who advocates those measures, for office I will not help destroy my country, Believing Harrison will do all in his power to bring back the country to the ways of Jefferson, I go for him: you will therefore withdraw my name altogether. With a single remark I close, and that is, I wish Harrison may do well, and that the best good feelings may be constantly cherished by us both.

Dear Sir Pikeville Manor Cty ala 22 oct 1840

Last month I wrote you relevant to the mention of my name for an appointment in the anticipated land office in the Cherokee Counties, & mentioned - altho, as the result of my honest & independant conviction I supported White, yet, as every good citizen should, I bow'd to the nation will. Had a way, still unclear to support the measures of Mr Van Buren so far, as my judgment become satisfied, they were safe for the nation, more I would not do no matter who was president, well Sir, The president recommended the bankrupting our State Banks, and said it was clearly Constitutional, See message of 37. Congress passed down, I had thot that measure dead, Only slept, Last Congress it was vetoed, and I expect it may be again looked for at the next session, That Bill matured into law, will it not place every Bank in the U, States & their influence mainly, at the feet of & in the mindy power, Such had been the Course of things, the Banks, the government & the repeated issues of Treasury notes, I thot an experiment of the Sub treasury might be ventured, But when I come to search coolly and as I think deeper into the operation of the measure, The power it creates, increases and gives to the President, The vast spread temptation and evil power, to so many holding the Keys over the public money, & all those dependant on and looking subservient and useful to their creative & dismissing power, I think the measure most happily calculated well to destroy, The liberty of any Country, That any Bill, palpably violative of the Constitution and so distressingly important as it was in detail to all America, recommended, who never seen, by the president, stops me short, No man in America, or that ever was in it, should be trusted with the powers delegated in these three Bills, They would corrupt & make a tyrant of any man and destroy any Country, I cannot advocate the elevation of no man, who advocates such doctrine, for office I cannot help destroy my Country. Believing that Harrison will do all that honesty, ability, independance & love of Country can do to bring us back to the ways of Jefferson, I go for him, you will therefore excuse throw my name altogether, I close with a single remark and that is that Harrison may succeed & do well, and that Kind feelings may he cherished constantly by us both, and to you I remain Ever friendly Commodore Young.
