NINTH ALABAMA--(Infantry).

This regiment was organized at Richmond, Virginia, the latter part of May 1-61, and moved to Winchester several weeks later. It was there brigaded under Gen. Kirby Smith of Florida, but failed to reach the battle-field of Manassas because of a railroad accident. The regiment lay at Manassas Centerville till March 1862, when it marched to Yorktown. Gen. J. H. Forney of Calhoun succeeded to the command of the brigade, and was relieved by Gen. Wilcox in January. The regiment was under fire at Yorktown, with slight loss. It participated in the battle of Williamsburg, but the loss was not severe. At Seven Pines it was held in reserve, and did not suffer. It was now brigaded with the Eighth, Tenth, Eleventh and Fourteenth Alabama regiments, still under Gen. Wilcox. At Gaines' Mill the regiment sustained severe loss, and was rent and torn by the wall of fire at Frazier's Farm. With the army it took up the line of march for Maryland, and was under fire but not actively engaged at the second Manassas. It was part of the investing force at Harper's Ferry, and hastened from there to the field of Sharpsburg, where it lost 8 killed, 42 wounded and 9 missing. The Ninth wintered on the Rappahannock, and was under fire, with few casualties, at Fredericksburg. Its brightest renown was won at Salem, where it bore the brunt of a successful assault, and lost very heavily. The regiment moved into Pennsylvania, and sustained severe loss at Gettysburg, where the brigade had ~~281~~ 281 killed and wounded. The fall and winter were passed in camp, near Orange C. H., and the Ninth participated in the fierce struggles at the Wilderness, and at Appomattox, with severe loss in each battle. Gen. Sanders of Greene then took command of the brigade. The fighting was almost continuous for several weeks, culminating in the terrible repulse of the invading army at the second battle of Cold Harbor, in which the Ninth shared without severe loss. From June till the end--nine weary months--the regiment was in the trenches of Petersburg, or engaged in the majority of the numerous and bloody battles that relieved the monotony of the last, long, and desperate collision of the great rival armies that had so long struggled on virginia soil. A remnant of the Ninth surrendered at Appomattox, the brigade having been in command of Gen. W.H. Forney of Calhoun for some months. Of 1138 men on its rolls, about 200 fell in battle, over 175 died of disease, and 208 were discharged or transferred.

For the Daily Reporter)

At a called meeting of Alabama Rebel Lodge No. 310, Free and Accepted Masons, Wilcox's old Brigade, held at Dr. Gaines' house, June 10th, 1864, the following preamble and resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, It has pleased Almighty God in his infinite wisdom, to take from us our beloved brethren, viz: F. P. Black, J. M. Alexnader, H. A. Davidson, Jos. James, R. H. Benson, J. W. Lindsay, W. S. Lighton, and W. H. Richardson; and while we mourn their absence, caused by an untimely death in the late of battles of Wilderness, Spottsylvania Court-house and others, where they nobly and heroically poured out their life's blood upon their country's altar, and we trust have gone to join that celestial Lodge above, there to mingle their voices in anthems of praise around the throne of God; therefore, be it Resolved 1st. That while we lament their untimely fall, we cheerfully resign their souls into the hands of Him who doeth all things well.

Resolved 2d. That as a testimonial of our esteem for these departed brethren, each member of this Lodge will wear the usual badge of mourning for thirty days.

Resolved 3d. That while we chronicle their names on parchment as worthy members of our order, we will ever bear in mind the unyielding heroism, and valor, that induced them to sacrifice their lives upon the altar of freedom, and consecrate their bodies to bridge the deep chasm of thralldom over which the triumphant car of Liberty will transport millions of happy souls yet unborn.

Resolved 4th. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Lodge, and also a copy sent to the family of each of the deceased brethren, and a copy furnished for publication to the Jacksonville Republican and Selma Reporter.

THE NINTH ALABAMA INFANTRY.

The Ninth Alabama infantry, organized at Richmond in May, 1861, enjoyed the distinction of having a joint resolution of thanks given it by the Confederate Congress in February, 1864. It was engaged in the siege of Yorktown, April 5 and May 2, 1862; at Williamsburg, May 5th, and at Seven Pines, May 31st and June 1st. This regiment won imperishable renown at Gaines' Mill and Frayser's Farm, was under fire at Second Manassas, and assisted at the capture of Harper's Ferry, September 12 to 15, 1862. It was also engaged at Chancellorsville and Salem, May 1-3, 1863, and suffered very heavy loss at Gettysburg. It was in the battle of the Wilderness, May 5-7, 1864, Cold Harbor, June 1st to 12th, and fought in the trenches at Petersburg for nearly 9 months. Among its field officers were Cadmus M. Wilcox, afterward a very distinguished major-general; E. A. O'Neal, afterward brigadier-general, and since that time governor of Alabama; Col. Samuel Henry, Col. J. Horace King, Lieut.-Col. Gaines C. Smith, Majs. H. J. Williams and J. M. Crowe. Among the officers killed were Capts. Thomas H. Hobbs and E. Y. Hill, at Gaines' Mill; Captain Gillis, at Williamsburg; W. C. Murphy at Salem; J. W. Wilson and John Y. Rayburn, at Sharpsburg.

EXTRACTS FROM OFFICIAL WAR RECORDS.

Vol. II—(480) Wilcox's brigade, army of the Potomac (Special orders, July 20, 1861).

Vol V—(1029) Same assignment, Potomac district, General Beauregard commanding, January 14, 1862, at this time at Centreville, Va.

Vol. XI, Part 1—(569) Casualties, 10 killed, 45 wounded, near Williamsburg, May 5, 1862. (570, 571) Gen. J. E. B. Stuart reports: "Captain Farley, who was in the entire fight, speaks in the highest terms of the heroic courage and fighting tact of the Ninth Alabama." (577, 578) Mentioned in report of Gen. A. P. Hill: Colonel Williams, with one or two companies of the Ninth Alabama, captured a battery of 8 guns. (590-593) General Wilcox's report says: "Among those that call for special notice are Capts. Warren Smith, Gillis and King. The companies of the first two were the first to enter the captured battery. Captain Gillis, greatly distinguished for courage, displayed an example of coolness set to his men. He was mortally wounded. Captain Murphy of the Ninth, conspicuous for pertinacity and courage, was painfully wounded in the arm. He remained on the field and commanded his company until shot through the body and borne from the field." (594, 595) Col. Sam. Henry's report: "The charge was made with a zeal and determination that would have done honor to tried veterans—not a man faltering. . . . In conclusion, you will permit me to assure you of the coolness and gallantry of both officers and men during the entire day." The regiment took during the day 70 prisoners. (596, 599, 822) Mentioned in reports of Col. J. J. Woodward, Col. L. Q. C. Lamar, Gen. D. E. Sickles, U. S. A. (986-988) Mentioned in report of General Wilcox, Seven Pines, May 31, 1862.

Vol. XI, Part 2—(486, 503) Wilcox's brigade, Longstreet's division, Magruder's corps. Medical director reports 66 killed, 109 wounded, June 26th to July 1, 1862.

(770-775) Report of General Wilcox, Gaines' Mill, June 27th: "Capt. E. Y. Hill killed, far in advance, in field. Capt. T. H. Hobbs dangerously wounded. . . . Lieutenant Wayland, quartermaster, severely wounded. The latter officer's duties did not require his presence in battle, but he served with his company with great coolness and courage. He served in like manner at Seven Pines." (777-779) General Wilcox's report of battle of Frayser's Farm, June 30th: "Captain King, commanding the Ninth Alabama, is deserving of especial praise for his coolness and bravery; he also received a severe wound in the leg. . . . Of the medical corps, Surgeon H. A. Minor of the Ninth Alabama (and others), have given abundant evidence of their skill and untiring industry and zeal." (980) Casualties, 34 killed and 96 wounded, Gaines' Mill; 31 killed and 95 wounded at Glendale. (985) Capts. E. Y. Hill killed, and Thomas H. Hobbs died of wounds received, June 27th.

Vol. XI, Part 3—(481) In General Wilcox's brigade, Johnston's army, about April 30, 1862, 550 strong. (649) General Wilcox's brigade with Stonewall Jackson, July 23, 1862. Col. Samuel Henry commanding regiment.

Vol. XII, Part 2—(547) Assignment as above during battles of campaign in Northern Virginia, August 28th to September 1st.

Vol. XIX, Part 1—(804) Wilcox's brigade, Longstreet's corps, Maryland campaign. (812) Medical director reports 12 killed and 42 wounded, Maryland campaign.

Vol. XXI—(539, 1070) Same assignment, Col. Samuel Henry in command, December 20, 1862.

No. 39—(790) Same assignment, Chancellorsville campaign. Maj. J. H. J. Williams commanding regiment. (806, 854) Casualties at battle of Chancellorsville, 23 killed and 89 wounded. (858-861) Report of General Wilcox: "The Ninth Alabama in rear of this regiment sprang forward as one man, and with the rapidity of lightning restored the continuity of our line, breaking the lines of the enemy with its deadly fire and forcing him to give way, and following him so that he could not rally. . . . Capt. W. C. Murphy, Ninth Alabama, highly distinguished at the battle of Williamsburg, where he received two severe wounds. He fell at Salem Church in the thickest of the fight and in advance of his men." He speaks highly of Maj. J. H. J. Williams,

Cpts. J. H. King and M. G. May, who were distinguished, having with their companies captured 13 officers and 236 men. He continues: "I cannot close this report without calling to your especial notice the conduct of one entire regiment of this brigade, the Ninth Alabama. . . . I also beg leave to commend to your favorable notice Private J. W. Brundridge of the Ninth Alabama."

No. 44—(30) Mentioned by Gen. Dan Tyler, U. S. A., Maryland Heights, June 25, 1863. (288) Wilcox's brigade, Anderson's division, Third corps, Gen. A. P. Hill, army of Northern Virginia, Gettysburg, July 1-3, 1863. (332, 343) Casualties at battle of Gettysburg, 3 killed, 55 wounded. (619-621) Report of General Wilcox: "Capt. G. C. Smith, severe wound through the body (entitled to promotion to lieutenant-colonel). Capt. J. H. King (entitled to promotion to colonel) had a finger shot off. Private Brundridge severely wounded." He gives special praise to Captain King and Captain May on second day.

No. 48—(400, 819) Assignment as above, Col. J. H. King in command of regiment, October 31, 1863.

No. 49—(685, 900) Assignment as above, December, 1863.

No. 60—(1152) Mentioned by General Lee as having re-enlisted, February 10, 1864, Orange Court House. (1182) Joint resolution of thanks to the Ninth Alabama regiment: "Resolved by the Congress of the Confederate States of America, That Congress hails with delight the manifestations evinced by the brave and gallant officers and privates of the Ninth regiment, Alabama volunteers, who have stood under the fire of the enemy for nearly 3 years, never to yield to Northern oppression, and for this act of patriotism and exalted self-sacrifice, in re-enlisting for the war, the thanks of Congress and the country are eminently due them. That the example of those brave men who have endured the dangers and perils of the war since its commencement is a happy omen for the future, and should encourage Congress and the country to rest with an abiding hope and confidence in the success of our arms and the final triumph of liberty, under the lead of those brave and unconquerable spirits. Approved February 16, 1864."

No. 67—(966, 976, 1025) Perrin's brigade, Lee's army,

Third Sergeant H.H. Bibb was from Winston County, He was a good soldier and survived the war. When the Winston men returned to their homes, they found the country in great fear of a band of Tories, who had been robbing and murdering the people. The soldier boys made short work of them. Some were disposed of "without shoving," and the rest becoming alarmed, "stood not on the order of their going." My old friend, Doctor Andrew Kaiser, had been killed by them, and I think his house burned, and his widow fled from her home. When Bibb returned he carried Mrs. Kaiser to her home, and assisted in rebuilding her house. He had gone out west somewhere.

DEMOPOLIS; APRIL 10, 1864.

Mr. Editor: I desire, through your columns, to bring the following to the attention of the patriotic citizens of Alabama. I have received a letter from Gen. Perrin, commanding Wilcox's old Brigade, Army of Northern Virginia, in which he says: "I wish, while you are at home you would try to get some supplies for the 9th Alabama Regiment, such as clothing, shoes, &c. The men of this Regiment are badly clothed. Their homes in North Alabama are in the hands of the enemy, and some of them are actually suffering."

The 9th Alabama Regiment has, ever since its organization, been in service in the Army of Northern Virginia, and its battle-torn flag is now covered with the names of the victories which it is its glory to have performed a conspicuous part in achieving. From Williamsburg to the bloody heights of Gettysburg it has nobly bared its breast to our foes, and has ever sustained unsullied the honor and fair name of Alabama. Although the homes of its members have, with few exceptions, fallen into the hands of the enemy, and it has in its three years' service lost over six hundred in killed and wounded, it still presents a dauntless front, and has cheerfully re-enlisted for the war, determined to uphold its well earned reputation of being one of the best fighting regiments of our army to the end of this contest. It is unnecessary to plead in their behalf to this patriotic community.---It will be enough for them to know that their commanding General declares that they are suffering. Let each man, woman and Soldier's Aid Societies contribute what they can spare in clothing, shoes or money, and the comforted soldier will bless them, and their own consciences will applaud their good deeds.

Contributions left with the Montgomery Aid Society, or with Mr. T. M. Cunningham, of Selma, or with myself at Demopolis, will be forwarded to this regiment.

Very respectfully, &c.

W. E. WINN,

A. A. Gen., Wilcox Brigade.

DR. H. A. MINOR'S ACCOUNT OF GEN.
LEE'S SURRENDER AT APPOMATTOX

At Appomattox Court House, Va.

Some Reminiscences of a Surgeon of Mahone's Division

I was the surgeon of the 9th regiment, Alabama volunteers, Forney's (Wicox's old) brigade. Mahone's (R. H. Anderson's old) division, consisted of five brigades, one each from Virginia, Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Mississippi, A. P. Hill's corps, army of northern Virginia.

Early in the morning of the 9th of April, 1865, we were halted in an old field about a mile from Appomattox courthouse, faced to the right, marched in line about 100 yards, halted, stood at ease. Soon afterwards Fields' division came up, were halted, faced to the left, marched 100 yards, halted, stood at ease. We had heard much of "the last ditch". Here it was.

These two divisions contained more than half of the organized troops that Gen. Lee then had. This was the 9th day from the evacuation of Petersburg. During these nine days, we had had three days' ration. All our baggage, wagons, ambulances, surgical instruments, supplies and artillery, etc., had been captured. As we had marched the booming of cannons, the rattle of musketry had accompanied us; behind, on either side, and before us. But we had kept our alignment—half naked, hungry and weary—but stern and steady, the men marched. Up to this time we knew nothing of what was in our front—had not thought of surrender.

After an hour or two, I saw coming from the court house a cavalcade, two officers in front, one wearing the grey, the other the blue; about twenty men behind them, one-half blue, one half grey. As they came up, I recognized Col. Fairfax of Gen. Longstreet's staff. Stepping into the road, I asked, "Colonel, what means this?" His answer was, "Gen. Lee has surrendered to Gen. Grant." I was shocked beyond expression. The men of our regiment called to me from the line to come to them at once, to tell them what had occurred. I hurried to them and told them the news. No word can express the scene that followed; they had not thought of surrender, but they stood in line. After a while they were allowed to stack arms, but were ordered to remain near the line. A like scene occurred in Field's division across the road. We camped there until we started home. We were not allowed to wander about. There were no other troops in sight except mounted Federal videttes all around us, about a mile away. They all kept in perfect order. A Federal battery did begin to fire half-minute guns, but after a few minutes these stopped. Now and then a squad of Federals went by us, but always on duty with no stops. As they passed us they saluted us respectfully and wondered at the very small number of our men, no evidence of a disposition to crow over us.

Altogether, we remained in this "bull-pen" four days, the Federal indulged in no boasts, nor firing of guns, no cheers that we heard. Never in all history was a captured army treated with so much respect. We were half starved; too faint and weary, we were given one day's short rations while there, the Federals stating that they themselves had very little food.

Those reminiscences that I wish to lay stress upon are the manner in which the Federals received the surrender of our arms and their expressions of admiration. I will now tell of how our (Mahone's division) surrendered. I suppose all the rest of our troops were treated in the same manner.

On the 10th inst. we were marched a mile or more, then came in sight of the United States army, which we then saw for the first time at this place. In front of us was a field with two ridges or hills running parallel about one-half of a mile apart. A cross ridge connected them, making three sides of a parallelogram, with the end next to us open. On the three sides of this were standing a large Federal army; many thousands, all armed and in serried ranks, with arms "at shoulder", flags flying, officers in their places. It was a grand sight. No cheering, no orders audible to us. Perfect silence.

We entered the open end of this parallelogram half-way between the two lines. Oh, the heart-breaking ordeal for us. Every officer alert, arms to "right", shoulder shift", flags flying. Oh, the poor fellows. I cannot keep from shedding tears, now forty-nine years after. Ragged, dirty, unkempt, many barefooted, many coatless, some hatless, eyes swollen. Oh, so hungry and so weary.

Yet as they entered this place, where they were to be disarmed and turned loose moneyless, to find their way back to their homes in the various southern states, where mothers, wives and children were so poor, so helpless, where houses had been burned and farm animals had died or been carried off, these poor fellows dropped their route step and fell into parade step, threw back their shoulders, raised their drooping heads and looked at the brave array of blue on both sides and in front of them. Oh, how proud of them was I—were all of us, for we were all well-nigh alike in clothing and other essentials.

When General Mahone had progressed so far that the rear of his division was within the parallelogram, he halted his men and faced them to the left, ordered them to close up, then ordered them to stack arms. The reader must know that on such occasions it is usual to have the men to "ground arms", that is to lay them down on the ground. But here we had no such humiliation. We stacked arms "on the color line" then hung our colors on the center stack; then fell back in line. We looked at our guns; then with eyes blinded with tears, we looked for the last time at the colors. The old ragged rags that had been flags! Ragged? Yes, ragged from shell and shot. In place of the original staffs were sticks—makeshifts, for the staffs had been shot off. There we stood!

What of the Federals? Gen. Grant and his men treated us nobly—more nobly than was ever a conquered army treated before or since. The conduct of the Federals on this occasion was soothing and comforting beyond anything that words can express. As the head of the column entered this parallelogram every flag in that great Federal army came to and was held at salute. Every officer's sword was drawn and held in salute, and every man who carried a gun brought and held it at salute, so long as we remained there.

We looked in amazement. The army that we had been fighting so long, that we were now surrendering to, had suddenly overwhelmed us with kindly courtesy and high appreciation of our soldierly qualities. They stood thus until our forces had passed out of the parallelogram. It is almost impossible to estimate the comfort and relief this treatment gave us. It relaxed the tension of our nerves. We went back to camp, if that old field barren of tents, blankets, food, horses, or wagons, could properly be called a camp. On the evening of the third day we got our paroles. Next morning, lo! there was no army there. No Federals! No Confederates!

On the second day before we had surrendered our arms, we saw coming toward us, as we were jumping about our camp, two horsemen. Soon we knew that the foremost one was our dear old Gen. Lee, with no escort save one orderly. He was riding the old grey thoroughbred, "Traveler". As he came up we strung ourselves along both sides of the road. He lifted his hat and kept it up in his usual salute. His eyes were swollen; he looked, oh, so aged and sad. He did not speak. We stood with heads bare and streaming eyes. He passed on until out of sight. We never saw him again. We had received his last order. (Order No. 9), thanking us, praising us, loving us and bidding us go to our homes, rebuild them and make good and loyal citizens of the United States. We had submitted our cause to the arbitration of the sword; the game had been played; we had lost.

Dear old general! He was the greatest of the great in his prosperity, and adversity and defeat displayed the very highest and noblest characteristics of his Christian manhood.

The next day we remained in the "bull pen" awaiting our paroles. About night we (myself, my brother and a friend), got our paroles and our last order from Gen. Lee, his farewell to his soldiers, No. 9.

Neither of us had a cent of money, no horse. My horse had some time before become disabled. It was between 800 and 900 miles to my home in Macon, Noxubee county, Mississippi. We were weak from want of food. We had no baggage. We prayed for help and guidance to Him who is able to help and we started home.

THOMAS CRAWCH, of Sumter County. This gentleman is a native of Ireland. In the war of 1812, he volunteered, and as a private soldier did his duty gallantly, so much so as to deserve and receive the commendations of his superior officers. At the commencement of this war we find him full of patriotism, burning with indignation at the wrongs perpetrated upon his adopted country by the Federal troops, but at the same time too old and infirm to participate in active duties in the field; but nursing in works of benevolence and kindness to the families of those who have volunteered and left dependent families, all of those that are in reach of his benevolence have received it bountifully, and are now showering blessings upon his head. The object of this notice is to mete out to him that reward here which he so justly deserves, and to place his name on record as one whose patriotism is unblemished by extortion, and whose faith in the justice of our cause and of our final success is unbounded. This notice is a tribute to one who has done all his means permitted for the widow and the orphan.
