

President Lincoln was killed in Washington on the 14th of April. J. W. Booth, it is supposed, committed the deed. He was pursued and killed.

An unsuccessful effort was made on the same day to take the life of Secretary Seward.

Pennsylvania refused to allow the National Government to pay the expenses incurred by transporting the President's remains thro' the State. Gov. Curtin maintained that Pennsylvania would at least do so much to evince her respect for Mr. Lincoln's memory.
