GENERAL INFORMATION.

HISTORICAL.

The Lincoln Normal University was established at Marion, Perry Co., by an act of the Legislature passed in 1873. It was intended for a Normal School and a school for the higher education of the colored race. It was the first, and for many years, the only school of its kind in the Southern States. In 1887 it had an attendance of 400 and the State contributed $6000 annually for its support. At this time it was deemed advisable to remove it from Marion and Montgomery was selected as the new location. Here the school was reopened in 1889 as "The State Normal School for Colored Students." The annual appropriation was increased to $7,500 at this time, and a few years later an additional $1000 was appropriated from the agricultural Fund of the State.

The Legislature of 1911 increased the annual appropriation to $15,000 per annum, gave $5000 for improvements and repairs, and an additional $10,000 for an industrial building. Beginning with two teachers and a score of pupils, the school has shown substantial progress every year and had during the past year over thirty teachers and 1100 students. During all this time the income from the state was entirely too small and acknowledgment is here made that the success of the Institute has been due largely to financial assistance given by the Peabody and the Slater Funds.

LOCATION.

Montgomery with its suburbs has a population of about 50,000 about equally divided between the races, and offers the finest location for an educational institution in the South. It is one of the most healthful cities in the country, well drained, and having an abundant supply of pure artesian water.

During the twenty-five years that the school has been located here only three deaths have occurred among its boarding student, and no epidemic has ever visited it.

The colored citizens of Montgomery are intelligent and enterprising, and the criminal class represents but a very small percentage of the population. A spirit of industry and thrift is generally prevalent, with the result that they have accumulated over a million dollars in houses and other property. The school is located in the suburbs of the city away from the distractions and contaminations of the city proper.

PROPERTY AND BUILDINGS.

The school grounds compose five acres on which are a handsome brick building and five frame buildings. Tullibody Hall is a commodious, well arranged building, well lighted and heated and ventilated by the most modern system. During the present session two more brick buildings, a library and an industrial building, will be added. The grounds face on a street car line which makes it easily accessible from any part of the city. The grounds are kept in fine order with beautiful lawns and shade trees. The Campus Improvement Association, made up of Normal Students, assumes the responsibility for the proper care of the grounds during the school year..

DISCIPLINE.

The instruction and discipline of the school aim at developing the moral principles, improving the manners, and forming the habits of the pupils. The principles of honor and truth are appealed to as the great regulators of conduct, and every one is trusted as long as he is found worthy. The important habit of punctuality, regularity and precision, are cultivated by the arrangements and requisitions of the school; and its graduates go forth not only with a careful training in the Arts and Sciences, but with things of still greater value; with minds sufficiently cultivated in various ways to comprehend easily the new duties upon which they will enter; with manners to win the favor of those with whom they come in contact.

In a Normal School there should be no need of referring to the matter of discipline. Only those should enter who are disposed to submit willingly and cheerfully to all the wholesome restraints found necessary for the good working and reputation of the school.

We are, in a measure, responsible to the State for the character and acquirements of each student graduated from this school.

The value of an educational institution is to be measured not by the number of buildings on its campus, the number of teachers in its faculty, the number of subjects in its curriculum, or the number of students on its register, but by the amount of practical instruction each pupil retains when he graduates into the actual service of life. The word practical is used here in its broader sense of enjoying life as well as earning a living. Work, intelligent work, is necessary to the enjoyment of life. The lazy, thriftless cannot enjoy the pleasure of living or the joy of accomplishment. The love of service, and the rendition of honest, faithful work form the warp and woof of the instruction in this institution.

Education in its broadest sense trains how to live as well as how to make a living.

RULES FOR STUDENTS.

Every student on entering is furnished with a card of printed rules as follows:

1. Students must be regular and punctual in attendance.

2. Students must bring an excuse written with ink, from parents or guardian for every case of tardiness or absence.

3. Except in case of sickness, students must not absent themselves without previously notifying the president.

4. Students must be respectful and obedient to teachers and polite to each other.

5. Students must be orderly in the street in passing to and from school.

6. Students must have no fire arms or other weapons, tobacco or intoxicating liquor in their possession on the school ground.

7. Students must be attentive to their studies and manifest a desire to profit by the instruction given.

8. Students are prohibited from attending any dance or theatrical performance, except by permission of the president.

9. Students must not take part in any literary entertainment or concert, except such as are connected with a Church or Sabbath School, without permission from the president.

10. Students must abide by other rules that are made for the promotion of discipline and good order.

11. When necessary, pupils will be punished by suspension for any time not exceeding ten days, or by demerits. When the demerits of any student amount to one hundred for the season, he will be dropped from the roll.

EXPENSES.

Board costs from seven to eight dollars per month. Normal students pay no tuition, but pay an admission fee of five dollars—two and half dollars on entering and two and half dollars on entering in January, beginning of the second term.

Instrumental music is two dollars per month for two lessons per week.

Pupils in the Model School and the Grammar Department pay tuition on the following scale:

The first pupil from a family pays $1.00 per month of four weeks, the second pupil from the same family pays eighty cents and any member over this, sixty cents per month. This tuition is payable strictly in advance.

UNIFORMS.

In order to inculcate the virtue of economy the school has adopted uniforms both for the male and female students. Because of the adoption of the uniforms the expenditure for outer garments has been greatly reduced—for males to $15.50 per year; for females to about two dollars per year. There is no need of any other outer garments, except in rare instances, for all students are required to wear the uniform on all school occasions whether public or merely ordinary school days.

The reduction of expenses for dress has perceptibly increased the attendance.

The wisdom of this course has shown itself in the frequent words of commendation from parents and guardians.

In order to secure uniformity and the lowest prices these uniforms for both males and females must be ordered through the president's office.

INDUSTRIES.

The school maintains a carpenter shop, wheelwright shop, and a blacksmith shop. All male students below the Senior and Junior classes are required to take a course in one of these departments. The object of these industries is two-fold, to train the hand to greater dexterity and to give sufficient training to enable the student to earn a living by the trade.

Ordinary carpentry, and cabinet making form the chief work of the carpenter shop. In the blacksmith and wheelwright departments, wagon making and carriage building engage the students attention.

The thorough intellectual training given our students prepares them well for successful industrial training.

During the coming session a full equipment of machinery with motor power will be installed in the carpenter shop.

The sewing department in charge of two most efficient teachers gives the most thorough instruction in sewing, dressmaking and fancy needlework. Students who have the required amount of mental training are admitted as special students and trained for teachers of sewing or for dressmakers.

The school is in a position now to install a complete system of cooking and Domestic Science, which will be done immediately.

The Science of Agriculture and Practical School Gardening are taught during two years of the course to both males and females.

BOARDING.

There are no dormitories connected with the Institution. Students board in private families, under such regulations as are approved by the Faculty, and they should come fully prepared to give their undivided attention to the work of the school during the entire term. Usually not more than two or three board in the same family, hence they have the advantages of refined home life, and none of the annoyances of a boarding hall.

The tone of morality among the students is vastly higher than in Institutions where hundreds are crowded in a boarding hall. As a rule when a girl gets beyond the control of her parents she is sent to a school where she can be confined in a boarding hall. We do not get such and we do not want them.

ATHLETICS.

The Athletics of the school are under the management and control of the student body to a large degree and wholesome extent. There is an athletic committee composed of the male members of the Faculty and one representative from each of the five classes in the Normal Department.

Athletics are encouraged because it is well known that much good results from well regulated sports both in bodily vigor and dexterity as well as mental acuteness.

Exhibitions of football, baseball, and basket-ball are given among the students themselves from time to time, and between our teams and those of other schools, or any amateur team, both on the home field and abroad.

The school has provided a large enclosed field, ample for all outdoor sports, for the exclusive use of the association.

None but bona fide students are allowed to participate in any athletic games of the school and students who fall behind in their studies are debarred from games until they make up their deficiency.

RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES.

There are two religious societies—Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A.

These societies meet every Friday afternoon near the closing hour of the school, each in its own regular quarters.

Attendance on these societies is entirely voluntary. It is a very helpful sign, however, that so large is the attendance that junior Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. have been organized.

These societies are under the general supervision of some of the teachers. Bible instruction is also given by some of the teachers from time to time.

The International Committee of Y. M. C. A. and that of the Y. W. C. A. send representatives on annual visits to these institutions; and very flattering have been the reports made by these agents of our societies.

While the school as such has no jurisdiction over the religious societies, nevertheless it lends every encouragement to religious culture.

LITERARY SOCIETIES.

There are four literary societies in the school. These are under the rules and regulations of the school in the last resort; but are under the immediate control and management of officers elected by themselves.

The entire Normal Department is divided into these four societies, as follows:

1. The male students forming two societies, one for advanced classes, the other for the lower classes.

2. The female students forming two societies similarly divided.

The object of these societies is to develop the art of public speaking and debate; and to have the students learn how to conduct public meetings and deliberative assemblies. Also essay work and orations, and all the principal exercise that usually obtain in such societies receive attention. A teacher is in charge, in a general way, of each society, and the societies hold sessions once a week during school hours.

The duties and tasks in these societies are as binding as those of any other of the school. They are a part of the school.

MORAL EDUCATION.

Every child has, or is supposed to have, some idea of, some aspirations for, a happy, prosperous and useful manhood or womanhood. It is looking more or less persistently to the time when all the faculties shall blossom into beautiful colors and form and ripen into perfect uses. It has ever been the constant aim of the instructors to foster these ideas and aspirations, to kindle them into a vigorous, healthful glow, and to strengthen the high and noble purposes that spring from them, as they mount toward mature years. With this end in view they have endeavored to place before the pupils for their guidance, their duties and obligations, somewhat as follows, viz:

1. Their duties to themselves.—To secure the best results in this department of culture, they are taught to exercise in all circumstances a due regard of self-control; to care for and preserve in its strength and beauty, the physical organism; to confine the gratification of their desires and appetites within proper limits; to keep their plans for the future and their aspirations constantly directed to some useful occupation or calling as their life work; and above all to keep in mind they are spiritual beings, bearing immortal lives, for the highest culture through the great truths to be instilled by sound religious instruction.

2. Their duties to others.—In this department they are taught to cultivate due respect for and prompt obedience to parental authority; to cherish a deep and abiding love and tender interest for those who have loved and cared for them in helpless infancy and childhood; ever to remember the reciprocal duties of children and parents, of brothers and sisters, and mutual sacred obligations of friends; to maintain the strictest propriety in language and deportment to every and all persons whom they may chance to meet; to bear in mind the duties and obligations arising from their social relations; to cultivate the virtues of good citizenship under the best government ever organized by man; and finally, to carry with them the consciousness of duty and responsibility to the all-wise, all-powerful and beneficent Creator and Ruler of the universe.

A WORTHY RECORD.

The school has made a worthy record in the past, not only as to its graduates, numbering over 400, but the much larger number who left before completing the course. Hardly a county in Alabama or a State in the Union but has one or more of its old students on the farm, in the work-shop, as merchants, doctors and ministers of the Gospel, they are working in their respective communities, earning a living and obeying the laws.

The school has the reputation among those who know it, as being thorough in its work, and attempting only what it can do well. This policy will still be maintained and the coming session will prove one of the best it has had. The past session it had an enrollment of 1,100, but the indications are that this will be surpassed.

During the thirty-eight years of its existence the school has always had friends among the best people, and they have increased more and more as its work has become known, until it is now looked on as one of the most worthy State institutions, and enjoys the good will of all who know it.
