RICHARD DUNBAR.

Waukesha, Wis.

We make the following extract from the Times of June 25, 1873, published at Oconomow, Wisconsin. In speaking of Bethesda water, it says:

"In looking at the effects we naturally investigate the cause. What success? What has it done and what does it do? It has restored thousands from the brink of the grave; given health and strength to those deemed beyond the reach of all medical science, and turned the path of affliction to one of happiness in the blessings contained within its virtues. What does it do? It cures the deadly Bright's disease; eradicates all diseases of the kidneys; restores the urinary organs to strength and power; is a certainly specific in dyspepsia; and unfailing remedy to a diseased and poisoned system from any and all causes; a sure agent in all cases of debility, nervous prostration or loss of power; acts with unerring certainty in giving new life to a languid and overworked system—in a word, it is a natural restorer of health, and has performed the most wonderful and miraculous cures of any known specific on the globe."

"SPECIAL SERVICE"—AN INCIDENT OF THE LATE WAR.

BY REBECCA CAMERON.

Early in May, 1862, I had been scouting for several weeks in the vicinity of Yorktown, and on my return to camp Gary, I was summoned by Colonel Haskell, who asked me if I was willing to undertake a special service not strictly military, but indirectly beneficial to the cause.

I replied with alert cheerfulness:
"Anything you tell me to do, Colonel, I am ready to attempt."

Whereupon, smiling blandly, he proceeded to say:

"As none know better than yourself, a certain Captain Lester is the Yankee Provost Marshal in Yorktown, and it seems that he is desperately enamored of a young Southerner, who returns his affection, but refuses to marry an enemy. The love-lorn Captain has contrived to notify the War Department that he will join the Confederacy if he can be gotten safely out of his present position, and into Richmond. Both the lady and himself are in Yorktown, and I have been ordered to send a quick-witted and trustworthy agent to them to arrange the details of a plan by which this object can be effected.— Do you think you can manage it?"

"Well, Colonel," I answered, "it sounds like an uncommonly dirty job, but otherwise there's not a particularly nice trade anyhow, I don't know that I need be squeamish about a little more or less uncleanliness. I'll do it."

The Colonel furnished me with full credentials, and so forth, and that night I set off for Yorktown.

I had been in the city, at least computation, fifty times since the Yanks had occupied it, and my fifty-first entrance was accomplished with no difficulty.

Just after daylight, equipped in full Yankee uniform, I walked boldly up to Captain Lester's quarters, and demanded admittance on official business.

I was immediately shown to his room, and by way of introduction, handed him Colonel Haskell's letter, and while he read it, I took notes of his personal attributes.

He was a marvelously handsome fellow, with bright hazel eyes, rich, curly dark hair, a genuine New England complexion, clear, white, and red; a heavy brown beard and mustache, ivory white teeth, a tall, well-built figure, and strange-est of all, a deep, mellow voice, though he was a "twang snouter." After half an hour's interview, everything was arranged to his satisfaction, and I rose to depart.

The captain hospitably insisted that I should have some breakfast.
"Thank you, Captain," I answered, "but I show the Arab's prejudice of not liking to eat salt with an enemy," and so observing I bowed myself out.

My next assault was made on the residence of the young lady, who was a niece of Commodore P., and a very pretty little woman in the bargain. We held a carte of some length, as I breakfasted, served by the fair hands of Miss Blake. The plan of the campaign was the following:

Miss Blake was to give utterance to some incendiary sentiments which would be reported to headquarters, and, in consequence, she would receive orders to leave the town in twenty-four hours.

Her trunks would be carried to the Provost's office for inspection.
A press of official business would cause the inspection to be delayed until the next day, when the baggage would be returned passported beyond the lines.

The delay in the inspection would have been profitably employed by Captain Lester, in packing into the trunks all of his movable possessions, so that he might not be without a wedding garment when he reached fair "Richmond on the James."

Miss Blake would proceed at once to the capital, and there await the arrival of her lover.

The night after her departure, Captain Lester was to make a reconnaissance with a small force some distance beyond their outposts; a party of scouts, ambushed for the purpose, would surprise and overpower the whole party, and thus get the faithful Captain into our lines without his running the risk, and incurring the disgrace of deserting.

The scheme worked like a charm.
Miss Blake reached the rebel lines with the Captain's "purple and fine linen" intact; and the next night thereafter Hume's band of scouts turned out in force, twenty-five strong, and ambushed themselves three miles above the Yankee outposts.

'Twas a brilliant moon-light night and about twelve o'clock we heard a sharp clatter of horses' hoofs, and in a few minutes Captain Lester and eight men, rode straight into our ambuscade. As they did, Hume cried, in his clear, ringing voice, "Close in men! close in!" and the next moment a cordon of twenty-five well armed Confederates was drawn around them.

We had all received the strictest orders not to fire a shot unless commanded to do so by Hume. For the first minute the Yankees seemed completely bewildered, and ere they rallied, Hume demanded their surrender.

Before Lester could reply, six of the eight men cried:

"Hume interposed, saying:
"I don't care to sacrifice even an enemy uselessly. My men completely surround you; if you attempt to cut your way out, not one will escape to tell the tale. I don't wish to see brave men butchered, so I once more demand instant surrender."

Captain Lester replied at once, "I see no hope of escape, and therefore I surrender," and as he spoke he handed Hume his sword.

One of his men, a fine looking young sergeant, said earnestly,
"For Heaven's sake, Captain, don't surrender us like a parcel of trapped foxes right in hearing of our own guns. Let us be cut to pieces like men, if we can't escape."

The red blood mounted into Lester's clear cheek at the bold words of the subordinate whom he had betrayed, but he answered sternly:

"I command this party, sergeant, and I am responsible for the lives of these men. I see no use in a contest of four to one, and I have no right to sacrifice the lives of these brave boys to a mere scruple of hot-headed pride, and rash folly, and therefore, men, I command you to throw down your arms and surrender."

The men sullenly obeyed, and in ten minutes they stood disarmed, and ready to march to the classic precincts of the Libby. Their escort received the usual orders to shoot any man who attempted to escape; and the two in charge of Captain Lester were savagely ordered to kill him the instant he made a suspicious movement.

This sanguinary injunction was solely for Lester's benefit, so that when he failed to appear in the Libby his men would believe he had been killed by his guard.

Off started the prisoners and their escort, with orders to stop until morning at the first Confederate post that they reached. I rode on with Lester, who was to be sent to Richmond by another route, and half way to the city, I sent the guard back, with instructions to hint darkly of the bloody period that was put to Lester's attempt to escape.

We reached the capital without adventure worth chronicling, and proceeded straightway to the War office, where Lester took the oath of allegiance to the Confederate States, and was then sworn into the service. Being now made regemerate, and an honest man—(Heaven save the mark, how can a renegade dare hope to be called honest?) he doed "the livery of hell," as poor

Hammond used to call the uniform of "the best government," etc., and rehabilitated himself in Confederate gray. That night in a private parlor in the Spotswood Hotel, he was united his "soul's demitition charmer," as Mantilini phrases it; and when I congratulated the lady on lawful possession of her "galvanized" spouse, my connection with their fortunes was at an end.

Lester was never called upon to serve in the field, but he rendered efficient service in some branch of the war department. He was finally ordered to Charleston, where he contrived to "slip up," and his disconsolate widow went into a hospital until after the close of the war, and then took refuge from "the world, the flesh, and the—" in a convent in Canada.

"Be she alive, or be she dead," I do not know; but the story, as I have told it, is a literal fact, as any of the survivors of Hume's gallant band of scouts can testify.

Who Took Him on the Other Side?

"Who took him on the other side?"

A pair of soft blue eyes, full of tenderness and tears, looked up into mine. Sorrow lay on the lips that questioned me.

"On the other side! What do you mean, my darling?" And I looked wonderingly at the child.

"Baby, I mean." The little one's voice trembled. "He was so small and weak, and had to go all alone.

"Angels," I answered, as steady-ly as I could, for the child's question moved me deeply—"Loving angels, who took him up tenderly, and laid his head softly on their bosoms, and sang to him sweeter songs than he had ever heard in this world."

"But every one will be strange to him. I'm afraid he'll be grieving for mother, and nurse, and me."

"No, dear. The Savior, who was once a baby in this world, is there, and the angels who are dearest to him take all the little children who leave our side, and love and care for them just as if they were their own.

When baby passed through to the other side, one of these angels held him by the hand all the way, and he was not in the least afraid; and when the light of heaven broke upon his eyes, and he saw the beauty of the new world into which he had entered, the little heart was full of gladness."

"You are sure of that?" The grief had almost faded out of the child's countenance.

"Yes, dear—very sure. Little children—who took them in his arms and blessed them when he was on earth—who said that their angels 'do always behold the face of my Father,' is more careful of the babes who go to him than the tenderest mother could possibly be."

"I am so glad," said the child.—
"And it makes me feel so much better. Dear baby! I didn't know who would take him on the other side."—Children's Home.

Somebody touched off about twenty pounds of powder under the parsonage in East Canaan, Conn.

There was a great fire and a great flash, but no damage. The good minister was calm, but his hired man, Reube, coming down stairs four steps at a time in his night clothes shouted: "There, I know'd 'twould come fore I was ready for it!" He thought it was the end of the world. The minister tried to pacify him, but he continued: "Oh, it's all very well for a christian to be easy about it, but I'm sich a cussed sinner."

SHELBY GUIDE.

COLUMBIANA, ALA.

Thursday, April 23, 1874.

At the suggestion of many friends I announce myself as a candidate for re-election to the office of County Treasurer of Shelby county, subject to the action of a Convention of the people.

JOHN M. KIDD.

At the suggestion of my friends I announce myself as a candidate for re-election to the office of Tax Collector of Shelby county, subject to the action of a Convention of the people.

ENOCH SEALE.

We are authorized to announce as a candidate for the office of County Treasurer at the ensuing election.

Having often been solicited by my friends to announce myself as a candidate for office, in previous elections, and now more earnestly, I yield to their solicitations and announce myself a candidate for the office of Tax Collector.

C. W. O'HARA.

We are authorized to announce as a candidate for the office of Tax Collector of Shelby county, at the ensuing election.

MILLINERY.—Bruce Harris is in receipt of a fine assortment of Millinery. Call soon, it is going like hot cakes.

FIRE.—A fire occurred in Montevallo last Thursday night, which destroyed the kitchen on a lot owned by Mrs. Garrett, near the former residence of Maj. Strong. The dampness of the night enabled the citizens to save the dwelling.

On Friday last Dr. Acker, of Montevallo, was very seriously hurt by a kick from his horse, which it was feared for a time, might prove fatal, but we are glad to chronicle the fact that he is improving, and will soon be all right.

Our friend, Maj. Tom Peters, of Selma, sends us a copy of Gen. Joe Johnson's Narrative of the war, which possesses more interest than any work of the kind written since the war. The book can be seen by calling at our office, and we will receive subscriptions to the same.

The Democratic and Conservative Executive Committee for Shelby county, are requested to meet at the Court House in Columbiana, on Saturday, the 2nd day of May, for the transaction of important business.

D. T. CASTLEBERRY, Chairman. The Committee is B. G. Walker, John M. Deshazo, Thomas J. Martin and Col. W. T. Smith.

NOTICE.—There will be an election held in the town of Columbiana, (as provided for in the Act of Incorporation) on Saturday, May 2nd 1874, for the election of Mayor and four Councilmen to serve said town for the ensuing year. This 21st day of April, 1874.

By order of E. SEALE, Mayor of Columbiana.

B. F. WILSON, Clerk.

Busted comes out victorious in the impeachment case before Congress. We are glad of this, because the prospect was that Alex. McKinstry would have received the appointment if Busted had been removed, and there is no worse man than he is to be found in the State. Busted is bad enough, but good Lord deliver us from all such as Alex. McKinstry.

GUANO IN EXCHANGE FOR COTTON.—Capt. Pitts, at the depot, has several tons of the celebrated Phoenix, and Wilcox, Gibbs & Co's. Guano, which will be sold on a credit until November first, 1874, giving the purchaser the option of paying in midding cotton at 17 cents per pound. Those who have not yet planted cotton would do well to try a few sacks. The effect upon crops is wonderful indeed.

STILL THEN COME.—Two other very clever and competent gentlemen announce themselves for the office of Tax Collector of this county—C. W. O'Hara and W. R. A. Milner.

An old lady in Coosa county who calls the Cerebro Spinal Meningitis, the venereal old iliac come and get us.
