GRANGERS' COLUMN.

Immigration, North and South.

Two of the Northern April magazines, the Atlantic and Scribner's, contain articles descriptive of North and South. The Atlantic gives its readers information on "Life in the Blackwoods of Canada," and Scribner has something to say about the "Great South," in the form of a graphic account of "A Journey to the South," from the pen of Mr. Edward King. The New York Times, in its notice of these periodicals, takes occasion to contrast the two articles. Commenting on the article in the Atlantic, the Times says: "As a picture of the privations and troubles incident to the career of comparatively well-to-do immigrants in the far North, they will serve as a warning to many to choose a more genial climate and more favorable circumstances for settlement." And the notice of the Atlantic in the Times is followed by a very graphic notice of Mr. King's paper in Scribner's. "In pursuing an account of the resources of this part of our country," says the Times reviewer, "one cannot but be struck at the contrast observable between this account and that which is given in another magazine of the experience of a settler in the north of Canada, among the lands of that inhospitable region, which the local government, under certain conditions, so liberally gives away. Many intending emigrants in Europe are turning their attention to our Southern States, and the information they will derive from such laborers as Mr. King's cannot fail to strengthen their resolutions."

The Montreal Gazette, of April 1st, commenting upon these remarks of the Times, says: "We have no wish to derogate from the just claims of the Southern States as an inviting field for enterprise. Looking simply at the climate and soil, the South offers inducements of capital and labor to develop their hidden wealth and build up their waste places. But we must protest against the comparison of the Times and the method of Mr. King in this matter. Life in the backwoods of Canada entails many privations on the settler. But all Canada is not backwoods, nor was the article in the Atlantic written in the interest of immigration. Mr. King's articles, on the other hand, have a purpose in this direction."

The Gazette then quotes from Mr. King's article in Scribner, in which he speaks of the taxes not being heavy in the South, to which the Gazette replies that default is made in Virginia and North Carolina yearly in payment of interest, and that South Carolina and some other Southern States are prostrate under negro rule. The Gazette, after citing a statement by Mr. King of reviving prosperity in the tobacco trade at Lynchburg and the produce business at Norfolk, becomes indignant that the local improvement in these exceptional cases has not stimulated the public spirit in the direction of honorable regard for State obligations. It indignantly demands:

"The question then occurs—are the State debts to be paid or not? Repudiation has been fully styled the last resort of a government. Continuance in default is virtual bankruptcy. This gives a character to the people which is not very inviting to honest immigrants. If the good faith of the State is to be maintained by the payment of its debts, then who is to pay? Evidently those who bring capital and labor within its bounds. This will add to the taxation, and by the present policy of neglect to one tax—this is the specially dangerous fact before which the intending emigrant ought to pause—no one can tell what amount the debt may have reached, or how much of possible taxation is altogether ascertained."—Baltimore Sun.

Hints About Farm Work.

For store animals half a pound of corn meal per day for each animal, mixed with two pounds of chaffed straw or stalks, is with us an economical food. For fattening hogs, three-fourths to one pound of meal per day to each one hundred pounds of live weight is about the proper quantity. Three good plans for managing manure are: 1st, to draw it out every day and spread it on the land, or put it in a large pile in the field where it is to be used; 2d, to let it fall into a manure cellar; 3d, to wheel it out every day, or as often as convenient, to some central spot in the barn-yard and make it into a heap. The latter is our plan.

Petroleum is very cheap. We wish we could induce every reader to get a barrel and use it freely for preserving implements, machines, etc. In cold weather it is better to warm it before using, as wood will absorb more of it. Examine every implement and machine you have clean it; oil its rollers and tighten the nuts, put it in perfect order. Then wash it with petroleum. Go over it two or three times, and get on as much as the wood will absorb.

Horses that are working regularly need extra feed in cold weather. There is nothing better than chaffed hay and corn meal. Horses that are driven fast should have oats instead of corn meal. Liberal feeding is usually the most economical feeding. It is a great waste of digestive powers to feed a cow that she neither gives milk nor increases in weight; it is still greater loss to feed her that she must consume more or less of the fat and flesh stored up in the system. This is what happens when an animal weighs less in the spring than in the fall.

Selling animals requires judgment. To let them go without for several weeks, and then give them all they will eat, is a bad practice, and sometimes a dangerous one. The better plan is to have stock well where the animals can lick every day.

In fattening animals, it is the great aim of the feeder to induce them to eat all they can digest and assimilate. How this can be best done depends on circumstances. Change of food will sometimes be attended with advantage and sometimes not. There is one great rule that should be borne in mind: When the animal is hungry, in the morning, feed the less palatable food, such as straw and stalks, and when the animal has eaten as much as it will, then tempt it to eat more by giving it more corn straw, or stalks, mixed and moistened with bran and meal. The food left in the mangers may be sprinkled with salt and water and put in racks in the yard, and when the cows are turned out to water, they will be likely to eat it up clean.

When to feed will depend a good deal on circumstances. Horses and cows should be fed early in the morning, say 6 o'clock. Sheep need not be fed until after breakfast, say 7 or 8 o'clock, and then again at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. They do not like to eat in the dark, unless it is a little in the middle of the night.

Swine, owing to the low prices, have been much neglected. It is a good time to engage in raising improved breeds of pigs. The demand is now good, and is likely to be still better. Pork has advanced rapidly, and the prospects are favorable for a still further advance. Get a good breed, and give good care and feed, and pigs will be as profitable as any stock we can raise.

Lowndes County.

Sandy Ridge claims to lead the other beats of the county in the production of sugar cane, and the commodities it yields. Planters are painfully aware of what was done in the cotton fields, but they have not known what was (and can again be) done in the cane patches of Lowndes.

Mr. A. J. Brooks, of the Ridge, sent us a few stalks of sugar cane, and a quantity of sugar produced on his place. We submitted these samples to several merchants and citizens, and they were pronounced excellent in quality. The syrup is clear and of a lightest unrefined color. The sugar is of a grey color, as all raw sugar is, but the grains are large and crystalline, and it is superior in all respects to the sugar used on half the tables in Lowndes. We wish Mr. Brooks to supply us with the figures of his experiment last year, as we learn he is cured all the spare seed in the neighborhood in order to extend his operations.

John Peterson, a thrifty negro on Mr. J. A. Robertson's place, Sandy Ridge, is much pleased with his profits on cane. He seeded about half an acre at a time in the Cuban cane. On that half he made eighty gallons of syrup. Half of the syrup he sold for $1 a gallon, and a gentleman who sampled it said it was as good as the best sugar cane. He also sowed stalks for seed, the fine appearance of which brought him an offer of 3 cents a stalk; 2 cents being the general price. If John had sold half the stalks—$27—as he did, half the syrup he would have made $87, and a barrel of syrup, besides renewing his supply of seed.

He says there is less work about a cane than a wheat patch.

Last year was favorable to the growth of the cane stalk because there was much wet weather; but the experienced say dry seasons make a small stalk with fully as much saccharine as the large one.

These facts show that Lowndes can produce something more than cotton, —Hayneville Examiner.

The Executive Committee of the National Grange of the Patrons of Husbandry is maturing a plan for the formation of a statistical bureau in connection with the National Grange, for the collection and dissemination of information in regard to the condition of the crops throughout the country. The new bureau will be located at Washington, D. C., and in charge of D. W. Allen, Secretary of the State Grange of South Carolina. Subordinate Granges will report directly to the State Grange all information of interest relating to the crops, and the different State Granges will report by telegraph to the statistical Bureau of the Order at Washington. The bureau will compile and summarize these reports into a monthly report of the crops in all sections of the country, and will simultaneously transmit by telegraph to all State Granges, which in turn will furnish it to every subordinate Grange within its jurisdiction. This information will not be furnished to the press for publication, it being intended exclusively for the benefit of the members of the Order.

At the last meeting of Dayton Grange, Marengo, a committee previously appointed made the following report: "Our committee beg leave to make the following report of land employed and acreage in the various crops in area of 10 or 12 miles square: Hands employed 1873, 1854; in 1874, 1875, 1876, 37 acres in cotton; 1874, 1875, in 1874, 11327; decrease 3523. Acres in corn, in 1873, 9378; in 1874, 8974; decrease 402. Acres in wheat, in 1873, 1824; increase 757. Acres in wheat in 1874, 1901; increase 74. Increase 74. We find more clover, rye, and small grain sown, and an increase in stock. Although a great many farmers have left for California and other places, still the number of laborers remains about the same, a great many idlers, women, chaps, and dead beats, being driven by necessity to work. Though the number of hands is about the same, the acreage in cultivation is a good deal less, as the farmers all express a determination to work less land to the hand, and to work it better."

During our travels the past two weeks we had an opportunity of seeing a large portion of the growing wheat in Fayette, Sanford and Marion counties, and we are proud to state we never saw a finer prospect, at this season, than the most promising wheat we have seen was on the farm of our friend A. J. Reeves. Mr. Reeves is a farmer of unflagging industry and energy, who makes his gains by the sweat of his brow.—Fayette Watchman.

The Union Springs Times knows of one man, at the close of the war, who was $2000 in debt, and had no other property but his land and stock. He determined that he would raise the family supplies, and what cotton he could in addition. That land produced at harvest last year, $30,000. It knows of another in the same county who began with his land and stock and $10,000 in cash. He started out on the theory that he could buy cheaper than he could raise it. In 2 years his money was all gone.
