School Notice.

THE Second Session of the Columbian School (Male and Female) began on the First Monday in January, 1874.
With a clear sky, fresh hopes, and the smiles of a kind Providence around us, we shall once more go forward with redoubled energy and zeal to establish for our children a school which shall be worthy the patronage of our people.
We want no young man or lady in our school who is unwilling to be governed by the same regulations which shall govern themselves.

A Valuable Small Farm for Sale.

BY order of the Probate Court of Shelby county, Alabama, I will, as the administrator of the estate of the late Wayne E. Lee, deceased, on Monday, the 10th day of February, 1874, at the Court House door in Columbianna, in said county, and within the legal hours of sale, sell at public outcry, to the highest bidder, on one and two years credit, the last payment to bear interest of the first year—the following described lands of estate of said deceased, situated in said county, to wit:
The south half of the southeast quarter of the northwest quarter, the northeast quarter of the southwest quarter, and the northwest quarter of the southeast quarter of section 22, township 21, range 1, east—100 acres more or less—known as the dowry lands of the late widow of said deceased, and now occupied by Willis Nevins.
Purchasers will be required to give notes with approved security. Possession given 1st of January next, or sooner if crop is gathered. Jan. 10th, 1874.

THE SEALED WILL.

"Do you suppose, mamma, in case the money goes from me that it will be given to you?"

"Dear child, how can I ever guess? Your aunt, remember, is your father's sister, not mine; so it is scarcely likely she has thought of me. I am afraid the heir in the sealed will is John Garland."

"Mamma?"

"It is only guess-work, dear."

"But he is so unfit to have the responsibility of money; a man known to be a gambler and a drinking-man, if not a drunkard."

"Very true. Yet he is the nearest relative your Aunt Jessie had, excepting only yourself."

"I can scarcely think Aunt Jessie would leave him fifty thousand dollars."

"My dear, she has left it to you, her niece and namesake."

"But upon the condition that I never marry. If I do, the sealed will in the hands of the lawyer is to be opened, and the money pass from me to the heir or heirs named therein. You must know me well enough to be sure that the money would never tempt me to break my engagement; yet for your sake, I wish—oh, why did Aunt Jessie leave it to me at all?"

"Do not think of me. I can live as we have done since your father died. But, Jessie," and Mrs. Markham's face looked grave and sad, "there's one view of the matter you do not take."

"I dare say there are fifty. Remember, we have now had only an hour or two to think since the letter came from the lawyer. But what is the view you mean?"

"Charlie."

"Charlie?"

"Jessie's brown eyes were opened to their widest extent as she repeated the name, adding:

"Why, I haven't thought of anything but Charlie!"

"But—I mean—dear me!" said the mother, shrinking from uttering her thoughts. "You know, dear, you have always been considered your aunt's heiress; and Charlie is young and only commencing the practice of his profession. It may be that he will—"

"Be false to me for the sake of money?" interrupted Jessie, with the rosiest of cheeks and brightest of eyes. "We will soon test this," and she drew a writing-table to her side. "I will send him a copy of the lawyer's letter, and—here her voice and eyes softened—"the assurance that Aunt Jessie's will makes no difference to me."

Mrs. Markham made no objection to this step, but after the letter was signed and sealed, and dispatched to the village, by Polly, the only servant of the Markham household, she called Jessie again to her side.

Over the fair, sweet face of the young girl there had crept a shade of gravity and perplexity since the arrival of the lawyer's letter, that clouded the brown eyes, and the sensitive, mobile mouth a firm pressure than was quite natural. Life had been all sunshine to Jessie Markham; yet hers was one of the buoyant natures that find the silver lining for every cloud, and coax some sweetness from every bitter dose.

Her father had been dead six years, and his business affairs having become complicated in some way not comprehensible to feminine intellect, his widow and child found themselves reduced to an income that barely covered the necessities of life. They left the city and took a small cottage in the pretty village of Morton, where Mrs. Markham soon procured a class of music scholars, and herself gave Jessie lessons in the higher branches of English studies, German, French and music, till at eighteen her daughter also procured a few pupils in languages. They were very happy in their mutual affection, in the love of their pupils, and the cares of their little household.

It had been understood from the time Jessie was a tiny baby that she should inherit the fortune of her maiden aunt, from whom she was named, and who came from the city every summer to spend a month or two in the little cottage, always bringing pretty presents to brighten the home of her brother's widow, and lavishing tenderest affection upon her niece.

Yet, though Jessie herself had known of her aunt's supposed intentions, neither she nor her mother had ever made calculation upon a fortune dependent upon the death of the one for whom they felt the warmest affection, and the idea that others could be influenced by it was a new thought to the young girl.

She had given to her betrothed, Charlie Seaton, the first love of her young heart, believing that his love was all her own. In the six years she had lived in Morton, child and maiden, Charlie Seaton had been her devoted admirer from the first, and had recently finished his course of law study and been admitted to the bar. His fortune, inherited from his father, was very small, barely covering his expenditure for board and clothing; but he was energetic, industrious, and not without brilliant talent, a clear-headed, intelligent student, promising to make a capable lawyer, if not a shining light at the bar.

Answering her mother's call, Jessie nestled down in her favorite seat at her feet, saying:

"If Charlie was influenced by any hope of Aunt Jessie's money, mamma, it is better to know it now. I had supposed we would have to wait for our wedding day until he had some practice, and you know I have a little sum of my own towards first expenses. We could live here, and—there, I will not think of it any more till the answer comes to my letter."

"While you wait, dear," said her mother, "shall I tell you what I think is the explanation of your Aunt's singular will? You, who know her only as the gentle, sad woman of her late years, can scarcely imagine, I presume, that she was once a bright, hopeful, and sunny-tempered as yourself. I think it is to save you from her own sorrow that she has taken from you the power of giving wealth to a mere fortune-hunter. She would have you wooed and won for yourself alone, and as she has never positively said you were to be her heiress, she has probably never supposed Charlie biased by that hope. Still, dear, it is possible."

"Yes, it is possible," said Jessie, slowly; "but tell me about Aunt Jessie."

"Your grandfather Markham, Jessie, was one of the leading merchants of New York when your aunt, his only daughter, was introduced into society. Your uncle Hoyt was in good practice as a physician, your father doing then a fair business, and already married and in his own home."

"It was therefore, with the name of an heiress that Jessie danced through her first season, a careless, light-hearted girl, very pretty and accomplished, to make a pleasing impression wherever she went. She was but a little over twenty when she became engaged to Stanley Horton, the most fascinating man in all our circle of friends. Not only handsome and talented—and he was both—but possessing in a remarkable degree the courtly polish and winning grace of manners that go so far toward gaining a woman's heart."

"The absorbing love Jessie felt for him seemed mutual, and some congratulations were the order of the day, when your grandfather failed. From a man of wealth he became actually poor, and losing energy and hope, he came with Jessie to share her home."

"Stanley Horton, the man we all supposed a devoted lover, was fully aware of the change in Jessie's prospects, yet he continued his visits, making no abrupt, ungentlemanly desertion of his betrothed. Yet we who watched her with the jealousy of affection, soon discovered a change in her. She became pale and sad, often tearful, till finally she confided to me that Stanley was evidently weary of her, and had ceased to love her. Even then she attributed the change to some defect in herself, not seeing the mercenary motive till later, when time had taken the glamour from her eyes and heart."

"She gave him back his ring and promises; thus accepting the position his unmanly conduct forced upon her, of herself breaking the engagement between them."

"The first love of her life was the last. She was your grandfather's comfort until he died, and then went to keep house for Hoyt, who lost his wife and baby one year after his wedding day. When he died he left her his house and his money, and she lived there until she died. Still I know she loved you, and I am quite sure her will is not designed so much to keep you single as it is to win the disinterested love of your future husband."

There was a long silence after Mrs. Markham had concluded her story, and Jessie allowed her head to rest in her mother's lap, under her caressing hand, trying to picture a future of easy competency shared by the companion of her life. It had a bright side; there was still love and happiness for her yet. And then a bright face crowned with curly brown waves came before her, and she knew that neither the handsome house nor the comfortable income could ever fill her heart if Charlie left an aching void there.

Suddenly, like a gust of wind, there swept into the little sitting-room a tall, broad-shouldered young man, in a grey frock suit and slouch hat, which latter article found a resting-place upon the floor as the giant braced himself before Jessie in an attitude of grim defiance that sent thrills of glad music into her heart.

"Will you have the kindness, Miss Markham," said the intruder, towering in his six feet of manhood over Jessie's low seat, "to tell me what you mean by the absurd letter Polly handed me? Was it not understood that you and I were to share this cottage with your mama until I attained sufficient legal eminence to warrant the purchase of a brown stone front in New York? Was I not deluded in the belief that your presence in the ordinary department of our establishment was to reduce our expenses to the limits of our present income? Was it not represented to me that my present board was sufficient to meet the requirements of two in this domicile? In short, Miss Markham, in what way was I ever led to suppose that the fortune of your spinster aunt was to influence in the slightest degree your matrimonial intentions in regard to myself? I pause for a reply."

Jessie stood up her hands meekly folded together, and her happy eyes downcast till the long lashes kissed her cheeks.

"Please forgive me this time, and I'll never do it again," she said; and then the laugh dimpled her cheek, clear and sweet upon the air.

"Oh, Charlie! Charlie! I knew you never thought of Aunt Jessie's money."

"And you," said Charlie, holding her off at arm's length, "you can have it all if you give me up."

"As if I loved money better than you," said Jessie, nestling now in strong arms wrapped closely around her.

It seemed, however, as if Charlie was actually afraid of the money that was so temptingly near Jessie's grasp, for he commenced a series of interviews that bore entirely upon the subject of marriage.

"What is there to wait for," he would ask, and then enter upon calculations of his present expenses and those of the future, proving most conclusively that there was a decided saving for both in uniting their income.

"You remind me," said Jessie, "of the Dutchman who said he could almost support himself alone and it was a pity if two of them could not do it entirely."

But though she laughed at him, Jessie was quite willing to admit the force of his reasoning; and one bright June morning, six months after Aunt Jessie's death, there was a wedding in the village church and a breakfast in the cottage for a few chosen friends. Among these was Aunt Jessie's lawyer, for the will stipulated that the sealed codicil was to be opened at Jessie's wedding, if she preferred love to money.

The bride was a little paler than usual, when with a solemn face, the New York lawyer broke the big red seal. Visions of John Garland holding drunken revels in her aunt's house flitted across her mind, and then she looked into Charlie's face, and over her own crept an expression of perfect content.

The will was opened, and found to contain only a letter directed to Jessie, and a short, legally-worded formula making herself and her chosen husband joint inheritors of her aunt's fortune. Tearingfully the bride opened the letter from the dead.

"I do not," she wrote, "approve of the money power in a family being entirely in the hands of a woman; therefore, you will find, dear Jessie, that half of my fortune only is yours, the remaining half to go to the husband who has proved he loved you for your own sweet self, not for your fortune."

During the wedding tour of the young couple, Mrs. Markham, at their earnest solicitation, took an affectionate farewell of her pupils, and removed her household treasures to the New York mansion, to which in due time, came Charlie and Jessie to brighten the long silent rooms with their happiness, and established that loving circle which makes home of any house, however grand or however humble.

County Council.—In accordance with a resolution of Shelby Grange, the different Granges in this county are requested to send delegates to a meeting to be held at this place Monday, March 2nd, for the purpose of organizing a county Council. J. E. WARE, Sec'y.

Rev. W. H. McLean, Presbyterian, will preach at the Methodist Church next Sunday.

We learn from the Probate Judge that but very few mortgages have been taken in this county up to this time, and none of these few by the merchants.

The next meeting of the Good Templars will be held Saturday evening, Feb. 21st, at seven o'clock. A full attendance is desired, as business of importance is to come before the Lodge. By order of the Worthy Chief.

JNO. A. EDWARDS,
Secretary pro tem.

The distance between this place and Selma and Montgomery railroad, is just the same, yet by the new tariff of the Southern Express Company, the charges on a hundred pounds of freight from the first named place is fifty cents and from the latter $2. Why this difference? Our people can stand it if Montgomery can.

Seed Oats.

Leeper, Purcell & Co., have a fine supply of Seed Oats for sale.

The Demopolis News in referring to the illegally obtained and fraudulently issued railroad bonds says the "clinging argument in favor of wiping out these claims is the utter and total inability of the State ever to pay. We, therefore, continue to advocate the repudiation of the railroad indebtedness of Alabama, with the offer to the bondholders of all moneys that the State holds on the roads." And adds, that the domestic debt of the State, which was chiefly due in 1865, is just and should be paid.

We feel authorized to say that this issue meets the hearty approbation of a large majority of our people, and whether it is incorporated in the next State platform or not, will be one of the issues in our country.

The Anti-Liquor movement in the States of Ohio and Indiana, is becoming formidable, the women are the leaders in it, and they are storming the fortresses of King Alcohol, with prayers, prosecutions and jeers.

LOYALTY.—Mr. Frye, of Maine, who has been a member of the Southern Claims Commission, in the course of a debate in Congress speaks thus of the loyal southern claimants:

The commission are compelled to find the loyalty of the claimant. Now humanity is weak everywhere and is just as weak south as it is North. The experience of the commission shows that men will take the oath of God upon them and swear to their loyalty again and again, ay, thousands of times, when there was proof lying right by that they were as disloyal as almost any man could well be. The commission has found it absolutely necessary, in order to preserve the United States against these perjured claimants, that investigation shall be made all over the South.

Keep Away.

Brother Templar! will you please tell us what you mean by hanging around the saloons after you have pledged to abstain from intoxicating drink, and to do all in your power to destroy this curse from the land? Is it because you find the society of the saloon keeper and his customers more pleasant than you do that of sober men? Have you ever thought of it that you are thus saying to these enemies of our Order that you do not think half so badly of their business as you have professed and that you are giving countenance to their traffic? Whether you think so or not, it is nevertheless true, and they so understand. The presence of a Good Templar is worth more to them than if a dozen drunkards were always around.

But this is not all. It is dangerous for you to be there. You are human, and can be overcome by temptation. The constant presence of your enemy will produce a carelessness upon your part, which is dangerous to you and to the cause of temperance. Besides, you have no business there, or should have none. Men judge of you by your company, and when you are seen sitting around the saloon door, or cheek by jole with the bar tender, you are not bearing witness to the honor of your Lodge, or yourself as a temperance man. No man who has been bitten by a poisonous serpent, would be so foolish as to go back and toy with, or hang around the dangerous reptile, he was endeavoring to eradicate the poison from his system produced by the previous bite. Nor can you, consistently, continue to frequent these places without doing injury to yourself or your order. Keep away, therefore, and be known as true friends to the cause, and a foe to all its enemies.—Good Templar.

The news from Brazil, South America, shows that coffee must fall considerably in a few days.—Shipments to the United States for the week 13,000 sacks, stocks on hand 133,000 sacks, daily receipts 5,400 sacks. Prices range from 24 to 26 1-2 cents per pound.

The Montgomery Ledger has seven columns of tax sales advertisements.

The Moulton Advertiser publishes four columns of tax sales advertisements.

The Evergreen Star has two and a half columns of tax sales advertisements.

The Eutaw Whig has two and a half columns of tax sales advertisements.

The Union Springs Times has more than eight columns of tax sales advertisements.

The Demopolis News has fourteen columns of tax sales advertisements—about 50,000 acres.

HOW TO GET RID OF RATS.—Having seen in your paper—which for the past ten years I have filed for reference—many methods of destroying rats, I venture to give one that I am sure cannot be excelled by any of them, and which is not so dangerous to have about the house. Take ten cents' worth of calomel and mix it in one pint of corn meal, and scatter it where the rats and mice will be sure to get it, and I will guarantee it to kill at least three hundred rats, or a proportionate amount of mice.—Columbian's Rural World.

For the Guide.]

Communicated.

Amid all the varied scenes of a woman's life, mixed, as it is, with such a constant trial of energy and patience, there is nothing which so effectually drives away every care, and banishes every cloud from her heart, and lets the light of joy and happiness into her soul, as the pure, unmixed love of the husband.

Woman is a creature of love; it is her natural element—it is her native air. Some one has beautifully said, "The costliest thing made by the Hand above, is woman's heart, woman's life, woman's wonderful love." This sentiment, and this truth should be inscribed upon the memory and heart of every husband. Remember, that if you have sought and obtained the pure love of a woman, you have something of more value than earthly possessions, and oh! never, for once, allow the care and anxieties of business, cause you to treat her love with indifference. It is your duty and your blessed privilege to be a warm "genial sun" unto her soul, which shall ever keep clouds and mists from her life. You must exhibit your love not only with a constant tender care, but show it in words and looks, and by those loving attentions, which you so lavishly bestowed upon her in your "wooing days"—the wife is more worthy of these little attentions of affection than was the "sweetheart," she needs them more.

The husband should show to the wife, at home or abroad, that she has the first and highest claims upon his attention, and woe to that Benedict who is ashamed to be seen gallantly escorting his wife, or bestowing upon her, all needed, loving little attentions; such a biped of the human species, should be ruthlessly tied to a "Lone Rock by the sea," and left, until Gabriel shall blow the trumpet, which shall wake the sleeping dead.

We do not advocate that extreme, disgusting gallantry of some foolish husbands, who seem determined to make the world believe that they love their wives, whether the wife is cognizance of the fact or not. Public lecturers, and sometimes ministers of the Gospel, have been known to bore their audiences, with little family incidents, tending to impress the hearers with the monstrous truth, that he (the minister) is a wonderful wife loving man. Brethren every thing in its time and place. "Let all things be done decently and in order." If you really love this bosom companion, the world will know it by your acts, not by your words—the world will know it by her blooming face, her happy heart and joyous life. And, kind husband, if this dear, loving companion should be called away from you, it will be one of the sweetest comforts of your lonely life, to think over the many times you have made her joyous and happy by exhibitions of your warm, generous love. Then love your wife, cherish her as your own existence—make her happy, and you will be happy—your children will be happy—home will have attractions for them which will keep them ever near you, and if you have the Love of God in your own soul, it will early be shed upon their young hearts, and keep them far from the paths of vice and immorality. This union of heart and family on earth, will, but be a blessed foretaste of a glorious union beyond this vale of tears. A.

AN ACT to provide for the support of the Common Schools of this State for the current year.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Alabama, That in addition to the money which will accrue for the support of the common schools for the year ending 1874, by an act entitled "An act to keep in each county of this State a proportionate share of the public school money," approved April 19th, 1873, there is hereby appropriated out of any moneys in the Treasury, not otherwise appropriated, the sum of one hundred and seventy thousand six hundred and eighty-eight and eight-tenths dollars ($170,688.85) which is the amount of interest accruing on the sixteenth section fund.

Sec. 2. Be it further enacted, That it shall not be lawful for the Auditor of the State to draw any warrant on the State for the purpose of drawing said fiscal year in excess of said sum in the first section of this act named. Provided, that nothing in this act shall be so construed as to prevent the Auditor from drawing all warrants that may be necessary to carry out the provisions of an act entitled "An act to keep in each county of the State a proportionate share of the public school money," approved April 19, 1873, and that each and every duty required of the Auditor by said act, is hereby declared as remaining in full force and power; and all laws and parts of laws in conflict with the provisions of this act, are hereby repealed.

Approved Dec. 17, 1873.
NEANDER H. RICE,
Secretary of State.

AN ACT to provide for the payment of County Superintendents of Education.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the Board of Education of the State of Alabama, That each Superintendent of Education shall receive four percentum of the amount allowed on his quarterly requisition upon the Superintendent of Public Instruction for services performed in accordance with laws he shall also receive three dollars per diem while actually engaged in visiting schools and in his quarterly requisition he shall make affidavit of the number of days so engaged in visiting schools. Provided, that he shall not receive in any one year more than one hundred dollars for such service in visiting schools. Provided further, That no County Superintendent of Education shall receive less than three hundred dollars for his entire services as County Superintendent of Education and for visiting schools.

Sec. 2. Be it further enacted, That no County Superintendent of Education shall receive any compensation under this act for any requisition made for moneys which are to be paid out of the school fund for any year preceding the school years 1873 and 1874.

Sec. 3. Be it further enacted, That the provisions of this act shall apply to the school years 1873 and 1874 and all subsequent years.

Sec. 4. Be it further enacted, That all laws and parts of laws in conflict with the provisions of this act be and the same are hereby repealed.

Approved Dec. 9th, 1873.
NEANDER H. RICE,
Secretary of State.

A LOVE STORY WITH A SAD QUEL.—A young lady of wit and worth was spending the summer in Yonkers with her parents. She had made an impression on a young clergyman settled in a neighboring town; and he managed to effect frequent exchanges with a minister during that season, making his home at the hospitable mansion of a young lady's father. On a Saturday evening the young pair were seated in the parlor. "Well, I declare," said the minister, "I've got to preach to-morrow morning, and I have not even got a text." "Give me a text, Miss Jennie," "Will you preach from a text that I will give you?" asked the young lady. "I will," was the prompt reply. "Lovest thou me?" John xxi. Next morning the minister announced his text: "Lovest thou me," from which he preached a very good sermon in the presence of the congregation, including the young lady and family, during which the words of Peter, "Thou knowest that I love thee," were several times repeated. But Miss Jennie married another man.
