THE CONFESSION.

BY HENRY TUCKER.

Sleep sweetly in your humble grave,

Thou, martyr of a fallen cause;

Thou, who for noble, common cause

The martyr's name to pass.

In death of honor in the earth

The blossoms of your fame are blown;

And somewhere, waiting for its birth,

The shaft is in the stone!

Meanwhile, hark! the early years

Which keep in trust your stored tears

Behold your sisters bring their doom

And those memorial blooms

Small tributes! but your shadow will smile

More proudly on those wreaths to-day

Than when some common-molded pile

Shall overlook this day.

Sleep, angels, hither from the skies!

There is no holier spot of ground

Than where defeated valor lies,

By mourning beauty crowned.

Wesley's Fickle Flame.

A writer in the Galaxy says: "In 1749 occurred an odd episode in Wesley's life. On one of his missionary journeys he had been taken sick at Newcastle, where he was nursed by Grace Murray, one of his female 'helpers,' a handsome, clever widow of four-and-thirty, Wesley himself being twelve years older.

He asked her to marry him. She seemed amazed, and replied, 'This is too great a blessing. I can't tell how to believe it. This is all I have wished under heaven!' Wesley quite naturally took this as a formal rejection. But Grace had not long before nurse John Bennett, a Methodist preacher of about her own age,

and Wesley was soon astounded by a joint letter from Grace and John,

asking his consent to their marriage.

Then ensued a comedy lasting

for months, the like of which no

playwright had ventured to put upon the stage. Grace would have been quite content with either of her lovers, were it not for the other. But contrary to all example, it was the absent one she wanted. 'When Wesley was with her she longed for Bennett; when Bennett was present

she longed for Wesley.' How many times she broke and renewed her engagement with each it would be hard to tell. 'I love you,' she said

to Wesley, 'a thousand times better than I ever loved John Bennett; but I am afraid I don't marry him until I can see that you are promised her again to Bennett. A week after she told Wesley

she was determined to live and die with him. She indeed wanted to be married at once; but Wesley wished for some delay. Grace said she would not wait more than a year.

A fortnight later she met Bennett,

fell at his feet, and acknowledged that she had used him ill. They were married a week after. This strange marriage seems to have turned out a happy one. Bennett died in the triumph of faith ten

TUSKALOOSA, MAY 7, 1874.

There is sorrow in the air.

When we behold a young man, of good qualities, on the brink of ruin, our impulse leads us to exert ourself in his behalf, to prevent him, if possible, from pursuing the reckless and unwise path of his waywardness, to the dreadful abyss of destruction. It is this disposition to save, promising but unbridled genius, that has induced us to make the following brief (though not an editorial leader) headed "Why so malignant?" contained in that morning newspaper, the Montgomery News, of date the 29th ult., the length of which leader is nearly one column, devoted to the editor of this little weekly paper.

The said News is ably edited by the Christian, statesman, patriot, scholar, eminent scholar and urban gentleman—Col. Robert Teedy, better known as the author of a remarkable poem called "Ahassernus," supposed to be now obsolete. The author of "Ahassernus" should learn, first, to discriminate between "malignant" and "poisonous." We do not suppose that there is another man beside himself, having read our article, that has given him excessive umbrage, who discovered in said article one word savoring of malignancy. No such feeling actuated us in penning it. For Col. Teedy, personally, we have always had a high regard, the greatest esteem; and we do not intend that the entire cordiality of our party shall be dissipated by anything that his irresponsible quill may indite against him, by which we mean that when he takes his column in hand, his dignity gets the better of his discretion so far that it would be ungenerous to lay the fault of his untimely right hand to the "inmost recesses" of his noble heart.

The secret of Col. Teedy's volcanic irascibility, in the fact that the very same confounded State Journal that copies articles from the Ala. Beacon, did, with impudence, pretense, and in utter disregard of our own wishes and Col. Teedy's dignity, republish a portion of our editorial of two weeks ago, headed "The Combat of Ahassernus." If we ever get so much as a bird's eye view of that scoundrel typographical copyist—Bingham—we will give him a thrashing, provided he can be caught by a one-legged, indignant editor of a little weekly newspaper. He is the irritating cause of all this lively tempest in the family tea-pot.

Col. Teedy, author of the extinct "Ahassernus," pretends that the only reason he was disposed to give the Beacon a kind and respectful welcome, was the fact of our being the son of our father, and related to the Randolphs, for whom he entertains respect and affection. Now, it is not remarkable how great minds will run in the same channel! Our only reason for placing the News on our exchange list, was because the proprietors, editor himself is a son of a former President of the United States, for whom we have ever had great regard. No other possible circumstance could have induced us to submit, daily, to the perusal of such "variegated nonsense" as that emanating from the alarmingly developed self-esteem of his morbidly sensitive brain.

Col. Teedy thinks that, by sending us the News, he is entering into a "friendly obligation" upon us, he is easily mistaken. If he can do without the Blade, he can do sans the News. Why, Col. Teedy, must imagine that the paper of which he is editor is the one of all newspapers, that the slightest objection to receiving the News, as an exchange, but we distinctly inform its captious, over-sensitive editor that so long as we get the weekly Blade, we shall continue him fully repaid for the privilege that he gets a good paper. We say this, not in a spirit of vanity, but we do not really think that our paper is "much pompier" than the News, or even as the News, perhaps better, because, as it is issued only once a week, by the rule of the Alabama Constitution, it is a "weekly paper," and thus does the Blade.

Writes Col. Teedy: "It so happened, therefore, that we have only occasionally deemed it proper or necessary to notice an issue of the Blade, but cannot now recollect one that did not contain some ill-natured and wantonly assault upon myself." What consummate egotism, to be sure! If the first part of the sentence be true, it proves only that Col. Teedy notices those exchanges alone that have something to say of his important self. The latter portion proves that Col. Teedy can be guilty of the same immoral act that he faultfully accuses us of, viz: "actual misrepresentation." Col. Teedy is seldom in our thoughts, and less frequently in our columns; we advise him, hereafter, to be angry as much as "a wet hen," if he pleases, and sin not by substituting fiction for fact.

Of all "the professing Democratic-Conservative mischievous leaders in the State," (we quote from Col. Teedy) this author of "Ahassernus" and poet of Poets, does the most damage to the party. The idea of the Chairman of the State Executive Committee so far forgetting himself, in his impotent rage, as to publish, in column upon column, editorials, of editors of little country newspapers, just because they decline to admit that the party can do no wrong! Alas! alas! the decline of Democracy in Alabama dates, back to the unhappy event when the mantle of the illustrious political leader, Gen. James Holt Clinton, fell upon the insignificant shoulders of Col. Robert Teedy! Then it was that a great dead giant robe dropped upon an infinitesimal quick pigmy's frame!

And how loose does it hang about him! Defeat after defeat has marked the political pathway of one who is utterly deficient in the elementary qualities of leadership! The sooner the party gets rid of the inappropriate and injurious figure-head, the better. This could be effected by sending him to Congress, where his individuality would be lost, and his eccentricities be removed beyond all harmful results to the State. There are hundreds of good and true white men in Alabama, any one of whom would make an infinitely better leader of the party, than the present incumbent and innumeration.

Col. Teedy's closing paragraph of ill-natured repudiation, is characteristic of the prurient conceit of the man. He has the painful modesty to ask his "contemporaries to give special notice to what we (he) have here said." What a demand is that! If we did not know the author of "Ahassernus" personally, and know him to be really a most excellent gentleman, we would be forced to regard him, after this, in the light of an egregious egotist—an insufferable monomaniac on the subject of SELF.

We regard, with serious apprehension, the future of the party in this State, so long as the distinguished author of "Ahassernus" is at the head of it. He takes occasion "to demonstrate, whenever he puts his hand to paper, the fact that he is surely doing 'the Democratic and Conservative party all the harm a passion for Tyler notoriety in some unusual irritation of his pinal glands, during the summer, may spasmodically persuade him to do, and we must expect it, and be prepared for it," by promoting him, in some way, to a higher office outside of the State.

The fact is, this worthy son of a noble sire has been terribly spoiled by the sycophants of the party in this State; fellows who are ever ready to lick the boots of any one possessed of a little brief authority. These sycophants, mostly of the press, have, with spongelike meanness of spirit, tickled Teedy till he has learned to think of himself more highly than he ought to think.

Col. Teedy has conceived the very false idea, that the editors of all anti-Radical papers who do not strictly conform their political views with an agreeable exactness to his own, are damaging the party. If he is the party, then we confess that some Democratic papers are doing it an injury; but of these, the News, of which he is editor, ranks first. Col. Teedy's own "pneumatic" editorials in condemnation of a portion of the country press, have done, and will continue to do, unless he learns wisdom, the party, i. e., provided it is Col. Teedy, more harm than the assaults of his enemies could possibly do. But, in the opinion of many good Democrats, Col. Teedy, instead of being the head and front of the party in Alabama, is really only a noisy, nerve-rattling rattle at the tail-end. So far from being alone in our estimate of the gentleman, we have found, in a limited intercourse with influential men of the party, that they regard him as distressingly unsuited for the position he occupies, though all agree with us that he is certainly a most estimable man, and means well, all ways.

And now we have done joking Col. Teedy, since his amour propre is so tremendous that he cannot bear good-natured criticism. He will not suffer aught to "come betwixt the wind and his nobility," and his nose. We have written the foregoing in the same spirit with which a doctored father would admonish an erring child; in kindness of spirit, for Col. Teedy's good; and have acted on the Wise Man's admonition, that he who spurs the red, spoils the child. We love Col. Teedy as a man; we pity him as a politician. Sic transit, etc.

Hon. John M. Martin.

A very complimentary communication appears in the Montgomery Morning News of the 29th ult., signed "West Alabamian," recommending the gentleman whose name heads this paragraph, as a suitable candidate for Congress from the State at Large. The News states that it is "from the pen of a distinguished lawyer and one of the most valuable Democratic leaders in the Western part of the State."

We fully concur in the views of this distinguished correspondent, and would be delighted to see Mr. Martin promoted from the office of State Senator, which he has filled with such marked ability—to a seat in the U. S. Congress. We regret that the length of "West Alabamian's" letter prevents us from republishing it in the Blade.

Monday, at 12 M., on the adjournment of Circuit Court for dinner, a public meeting was held in the Court House for the purpose of hearing Democratic speeches. On motion, Dr. Gregory was called to the chair, and loud calls were made for Hon. B. B. Lewis to address the large audience; which that distinguished gentleman did in one of his most happy efforts. His speech, lasting about an hour, was admirable, and elicited frequent applause. He depicted the great calamities that would certainly result from want of harmony and organization in the elements opposed to Radicalism; proving, conclusively, that divisions in the white man's party now will be productive of disaster and ruin to the State, and insure a continuance of Radical rule. He placed himself squarely on the white man's platform, showing that it had been forced upon the Democrats by the opposite party, volens volens. The speech was calculated to do great good in this county, and his arguments favoring conventions were the most forcible that we remember ever to have heard. There is no doubt of the fact that, without organized and united opposition to the Radicals in this county, the latter will triumph, to the disgrace of the large majority composing their political antagonists.

On the 20th ult., the Mississippi river at Memphis was stationary, but forty miles wide. Former reports of flood and suffering are more than confirmed. Only about half of the Yazoo valley was flooded. Planters in Louisiana who hoped to make 5000 hogheads of sugar, now hope only to save seed. Most of the large plantations in the Teche country, abandoned. The water above Monroe was higher, by several feet, than ever before known. Philadelphia subscribed $3,000 for the inundated people, while the city council of Baltimore appropriated $25,000. Thousands of negro laborers are thrown out of employment and into a distressing condition. Many are working their ways back to the Black Belt of Alabama, and will, alas! cast their votes in the State election next fall. This is, to us, the very worst result of the deluge.

The Ala. Beacon and the Livingston Journal, continue in rebellion against the party (Col. Tyler). The former of date the 25th ult., contains nearly three broad columns of malicious sentiments, in reply to the Montgomery News. By-the-by, we see that Bingham continues to republish in his scoundrel State Journal, articles from the two weekly papers, enough to make Col. Tyler furious.

The sun shone all day yesterday.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Tuscaloosa, Ala., May 5th, 74.

To the Hon. J. M. Randolph, President Judge.

The Grand Jury listened to the charge delivered by your Honor, and at once proceeded to the discharge of their duties.

We congratulate our fellow citizens upon the improved condition of public morals, as evidenced by the limited number of bills found and herewith presented (most of them of minor character).

Our session has been somewhat protracted from the delay in getting witnesses who live at a distance; many have also been detained on account of high water; but in those cases they have promptly obeyed our summons as soon as practicable.

We have made diligent enquiry into all violations of law, and disposed of them for the public good, to the best of our ability.

We have examined the jail, and find it in a neat and cleanly condition, showing care and attention of the Jailor as to the condition of the prisoners. We also notice some improvements now going on in the rooms, and understand from the mechanics that it will be made perfectly secure at a cost of about one hundred and seventy-five dollars.

We respectfully suggest to the Commissioners' Court that they have another room repaired in the same way, and in our judgment our jail will then be rendered secure.

We have examined the official bonds of all the County officers, and to the best of our knowledge, believe them to be ample and sufficient, except the bond of the Probate Judge, County Administrator, and Tax Collector, which we think insufficient.

We have examined the books and records of the different County officers, and find them neatly and systematically kept, and the Court House, with all its rooms, in good repair. We also congratulate the citizens of our County upon the improvements in the Court House, thereby making it an ornament to the County.

We have examined the statement of the County Treasurer, showing the amount of receipts and disbursements, and herewith submit his statement as a part of this report, which shows—

Total amount of receipts to April 16, 1874, fourteen thousand five hundred and fifteen dollars and eighty-three cents ($14,515 83); total amount of disbursements eleven thousand six hundred and ninety dollars and seven cents ($11,690 07); leaving a balance in the Treasury of two thousand eight hundred and twenty-five dollars and seventy-six cents ($2,825 76).

We take pleasure in stating that we believe that all the County officers have faithfully discharged their duties, and would especially mention the efficient and valuable services rendered by our Sheriff, F. B. Hemphill, Esq., in the discharge of our duties. Our Billie, M. H. Sudduth, has always been prompt in his attendance upon the Grand Jury, as well as the Sheriff and his deputies. The latter deserve special mention for the promptness and dispatch with which they have executed all the summonses sent out, and we tender sincere thanks to each.

In conclusion, we would respectfully request that your Honor will again become a candidate for the office of Circuit Judge. In our opinion none could serve our citizens more faithfully, or satisfactorily, and in making this request we honestly believe that we but echo the true sentiments of the majority of our people.

Having completed our labors to the best of our ability, we would respectfully request to be discharged. All of which is respectfully submitted.

Public Speaking in the Court House Yesterday.

Never in the annals of time has there transpired a more tremendous outpouring of the people of this County, than yesterday. Planning and bills were daily circulated by the Times and Blade. The occasion was to decide a grave question of editorial stultification. Each quill-driver had his hosts of claqueurs, armed with bludgeons, by which immense applause was created. The Times champion (with whom public speaking is as natural as breathing) kept his ground for about one hour, spell-binding his audience. The editor of this paper then took the stand, and opened his speech with wonderful eloquence. Before he got fairly started, he seemed to grow awfully dry; and long ere he got through, he drained Judge Mudd's pitcher of water. Finally, toward the time when "The Clock struck Two," his spirits flagged under the copious stomach-baths, and he retreated amid a regular Bald Mountain upheaval of noise. Both speakers pretty well covered themselves with sweat, to make up for the glory lacking.

GOING! GOING! GOING! What is it going? L. D. BROWN'S six-ox wagon, with fifty bushels more of that RED-AX COAL, the best brought to this market. Will you have some?

[Advertisement.] Hon. RYLAND RANDOLPH. After hearing your big speech yesterday, your friends desire to place your name before the State Convention for the nomination of Congress at Large. Will you accept it nominated? Are you a Granger? BLOWHARD.

I will reply to the above in the next issue of the Blade, as time is required to think over such an important step as that of filing, with ability, the office of Congressman.

[Advertisement.] Mr. Eppron. The many friends of F. B. Hemphill, who has so long resided in our midst, and whose high character and unquestionable ability, so justly commended him to public favor, will be glad to see him nominated for the highly responsible office of County Superintendent of Public Schools. MANY VOICES.
