THE OLD TIME.

There is no song like an old song,
That we have heard for years.
Each simple note appears to throb With shapes that swim in tears.
It may have been a cheerful strain, But 'twas so long ago.
That glow, grown old, has turned to pain,
And mirth has turned to woe.

There is no friend like an old friend, Whose life-path marks our own.
Whose dawn and noon, whose eve and end, Have known what they have known.
It may be when we read his face We note a trace of care.
"This well that friends in life's last years Share sighs as smiles they share."

There is no love like an old love, A love that never dies.
Whose place, since she has gone above,
No other fills instead.
It is not we'll never love anew, For life were dearer if so.
But that first love had roots that grew Where others cannot grow.

There are no days like the old days, When we, not they, were young.
When all life's rays were golden rays,
And wrong had never stung.
Dear heart! if now our steps could pass Through paths of childhood's morn,
And the dew of youth be on the grass, Which time's felt any loss has shown.

Old song, old friend, old love, old days, Old things, yet never old.
A stream that's dark till sunshine plays And changes it to gold.
Though all winds memory's river on,
Mid banks of sore regret,
But a gleam on the peaks of long-gone That softens sadness yet.

There are over ten million women In America, and yet Tom Hutton, of Georgia, hung himself on account of a girl fifteen years old.

A woman, who had escaped a dreadful shipwreck, was asked by a religious lady how she felt when struggling. "Well, ma'am, very well."

That was an unhappy editor who wrote that "White pique costumes are now popular," and was gravely informed by the proof next morning that "white pique collars are not popular."

Adam had some consolation when he fell. Three or twenty acquaintances did not stand on the opposite corner and laugh at his mishap.

The Dubuque people after a good deal of wrangling, have decided that there is no reason to look down upon a woman because she wears muskrat furs.

Calio, Illinois, boasts of a bantam intelligent enough to visit the police court and to crow whenever a chicken thief is convicted.

An Englishman once asked a Soudan Indian if he knew the sun never set on the queen's dominions. "No," said the Indian. "And do you know the reason why?" "Yes," said the Englishman. "Because God is afraid to trust an Englishman in the dark."

THE SILVER CUP.

The palace of the Duke de Mohre was decorated for a banquet. A thousand and wax lights burned in its stately rooms, making them bright as mid-day.
Along the walls glowed the priceless tapestry of the Gobelins, and beneath the foot lay the fabrics of Persia. Rare vases, filled with flowers, stood on the marble stands, and their breath went up like incense before the life-like pictures shining in their golden frames above. In the great hall stood immense tables covered with delicious food from all lands and climes. Upon the side-board glittered massive plates, and the rich glass of Murano. Music, low and soft, now loud and high, floated in through the open casement, and was answered at intervals by tones of magic sweetness.

All was ready. The noble and gifted poured into the gorgeous saloons.
Silks rustled, plumes waved, and jeweled embroideries flashed from Geneva velvet. Courteous congratulations fell from every lip, for the Duke de Mohre had made a new step in the path to power. With guests, the laugh went round, and his guests pledged him in wine that a hundred years had mellowed.
Proudly the duke replied, but his brow darkened, and his cheek paled with passion, for his son sat motionless before his untidied cup.

"Wherefore is this?" he angrily demanded. "Which did my first-born learn to insult his father?" The graceful scolding sprang from his tongue, and he felt meekly before his parent. His sunny curls fell back from his upturned face, and his youthful countenance was radiant with a brave and generous spirit.

"Father," he said, "I last night learned a lesson that sunk deep into my heart.
Let me repeat it, and then, at thy command, I will drain this cup. I saw a laborer stand at the door of a gay shop.
He held in his hand the earnings of a week, and his wife, with a sickly babe and two famished little ones, clung to his garments and besought him not to enter. He tore himself away, for his thirst was strong, and, but for the care of his children, his family would have perished."

I went on, and, father, a citizen of noble air and majestic form descended the wide steps of his fine mansion.
His wife put back the curtains, and watched him eagerly and wistfully as he rode away. He was very, very lovely, finer than any lady of the court, but the shadow of a sad heart was fast falling on beauty. We saw her gaze around upon the desolate splendor of her saloon, and then clasp her hands in despair. When we returned her husband lay helpless on a couch, and she sat weeping beside him.

Once more we paused. A carriage stood before a palace. It was rich with burnished gold, and the armorial bearings of a duke were visible in the moon-beams. We waited for its owner to alight, but he did not move, and he gave no orders. Soon the servants came crowding out, sorrowfully they lifted him in their arms, and I saw that some of the jewels were torn from his man, and his plumed cap was crushed and soiled, as if by the pressure of many footsteps. They bore him into the palace, and I wondered if his duchess weep like the beautiful wife of the citizen.

"As I looked on all this, my tutor told me it was the work of the red wine which reaps gaily up, and laughs over its victims in downy merriment.
I shuddered, father, and resolved never again to taste it, lest I, too, should fall. But your word is law to me. Shall I drain the cup?"
"No, my son, touch it not. It is poison, as they told thee. It fires the brain, weakens the intellect, destroys the soul. Put it away from thee, and so thou shalt grow up wise and good, a blessing to thyself and to thy country."

He glanced around the circle.
Surprise and admiration were on every face, and, moved by the same impulse all arose, while one of their number spoke.

"Thou hast done nobly," he said,
"and thy rebuke shall not be soon forgotten. We have congratulated the father upon the beguiling of his sons, which may pass with the pleasing season. We now congratulate him upon that best of all possessions, a son worthy of France and of himself."

Autauga Citizen.

Prattville, May 28, 1874.

Don't be discouraged. Suppose you have tried all remedies and received no benefit, is there therefore no balm in Gilead? Verily there is. Your liver may be congested, your stomach half paralyzed, your nerves quivering, your muscles knotted with torture, your bowels constricted, your lungs diseased, your blood full of impurities—yet in one week after commencing a course of Dr. Walker's Vinegar Bitter you will feel like a new creature.

THE STATE OF ALABAMA, AUTAUGA COUNTY.
Probate Court, Special Term May 15, 1874.

Estate of Isabella and B. F. Hicks, minors. This day came G. A. Northington, guardian, and filed his accounts and vouchers for the annual settlement of his said guardianship. It is ordered by the Court that the 30th day of May, 1874, be appointed a day on which to make said settlement. It is further ordered that notice of the same be given to all parties interested by publication for three successive weeks in the Autauga Citizen, a newspaper published in this county, notifying them that they can appear on the day appointed for making said settlement and contest the same if they see proper.

W. G. M. GILSON, Judge.

CHEAP STORAGE.

Cotton Stored at 50 cts. per Bale First month and 25 cts. each succeeding Month, by Gilmer, Browder & Co.

As the season has now opened, we wish to make it known that we are offering extra inducements this year to Planters and Cotton Factors in the storage of their Cotton, and other Produce, entrusted to our care, in our commodious TIN AND IRON ROOFED WAREHOUSE. And as our facilities for the storage of Cotton are unsurpassed in the city, we will store Cotton at 50 Cents for First Month, 25 Cents each succeeding month, and charge only 15 Cents per Bale Commissions on sales.

Planters hauling their Cotton on Wagons and STORING IT WITH US, will find good accommodations for their teams and drivers at half FREE of charge. An consign to us by Rail Road will meet prompt attention. Thankful favors and hoping to receive a liberal patronage, we are respectfully,

GILMER, BROWDER & CO.

Cotton Stored at 50 Cts. per Bale First Month, and 25 Cts. Each Succeeding Month.

In order to serve our friends in the Country and Cities to their best advantage, we have in addition to our

WHOLESALE GROCERIES, PROVISIONS,

Liquors and Western Produce Stores,

Nos. 102 and 104 Commerce Street, Montgomery, Ala.,

Established a Cotton Warehouse and Close Storage Rooms in the large spacious Brick Fire-Proof Warehouse in the rear of our Stores. We propose to offer special inducements to Planters and Merchants in the Storage and Handling of their Cotton and other Produce consigned to us. Competent and experienced employees, well acquainted with the details of Warehouse Business, will have charge of the proper receiving, sampling, weighing and shipping of cotton. We respectfully solicit the patronage of the Public, feeling convinced of our abilities to serve them advantageously.
