THE OLDEST HUMAN REMAINS.—A modern writer says that in the Egyptian Vase Room of the British Museum is to be seen the skeleton of one Pharaoh Mykteris, recently unearthed in its original burial clothes, and surrounded by fragments of the coffin, whereas the name of its occupant can be easily read by Egyptologists, affording conclusive evidence that it once contained the remains of a king who was reigning in Egypt more than a century before the time of Abraham. The proof is thus explained in Gentleman's Magazine, April, 1860. About two years ago, Herr Danichen, German explorer of the monuments of Egypt, following up the indications pointed out by M. Mariette, a distinguished archaeologist, discovered on the buried walls of the temple of Osiris, Abydos, a large tablet containing the names of the ancient Pharaohs from the time of Menes—the grandson of Noah, and founder of the Egyptian monarchy—to that of Pharaoh Seti I., the father of the well-known Ramses the Great, including thereby the chronology of nine centuries, viz., from B. C. 2300 to B. C. 1400. This tablet, by far the most important yet discovered, has been compared to the sculptured figures of the Kings of England, at the Crystal Palace, Egypt, William the Conqueror to her Majesty Queen Victoria. Astronomical evidences, moreover, enables us to determine the time of two important epochs in the history of Egypt, one of which is connected with our present subject. Sir John Herschel has fixed the age of the Great Pyramid of Ghizeh to the middle of the twenty-second century B. C. The tablet of Abydos shows that the Pharaoh whose bones we now possess, succeeded the builder of the Great Pyramid with only two intervening kings. We are, therefore, warranted in assuming that the remains of Pharaoh Mykteris belong to the age to which we have assigned them.—The World of Wonders.

THE EYE.—For us to be able to see objects clearly and distinctly, it is necessary that the eye should be kept clean. For this purpose it is furnished with a little gland, from which flows a watery fluid (tears), which is spread over the eye by the lid, and is afterward swept off by it, and runs through a hole in the bone to the under surface of the nose, while the warm air, passing over it while breathing, evaporates it. It is remarkable that no such gland can be found in the eye of fish, as the elements in which they live answers the same purpose. If the eye had not been furnished with a liquid to wash it, and a lid to sweep it off, things would appear as they do when you look through a dusty glass. Along the edges of the eyelids there are a great number of little tubes or glands, from which flows an oily substance, which spreads over the surface of the skin, and thus prevents the edges from being sore or irritated, and it also helps to keep tears within the lid. There are also a few little muscles attached to the eye which enable us to move it in every direction; and when we consider the different motions they are capable of giving to the eye, we cannot but admire the goodness of Him who formed them, and thus saved us the trouble of turning our heads every time we wished to view an object.

A GRANGER'S DEBATE.—The London Gazette, a staunch Granger's paper, publishes the following, which is too good to be lost:
A Granger dreamed that he died; he went straight to the spirit world; he knocked at the gate of the New Jerusalem and it was opened unto him. The books were opened; he was asked, "Did you ever belong to any secret societies?" to which he replied, "I did. To the Grangers." "Then sir, you cannot be admitted, depart." He then went to the door of the bottomless pit, where the sinners were again asked him by the Devil, and again he was told to depart. After he had gone a little way off he was accosted by the homely ruler of the pit, when the following propositions were made: "Stranger, said Nick, 'I will not admit you here; but I will sell you two hundred barrels of burrstone for 'cash, ten per cent. off,' and you can start a little hole of your own, with no agents or middle-men?"

A WISE PARENT.—Sophronius, a wise teacher, would not suffer his grown-up sons and daughters to associate with those whose conduct was not pure and upright.
"Dear father," said the gentle Eulalia to him one day, when he forbade her to accompany her brother, to visit the volatile Lucinda. "Dear father, you must think us very childish, if you imagine we should be exposed to danger by it."
The father took in silence a dead coal from the hearth and reached it to his daughter.
"It will not hurt you, my child, take it."
Eulalia did so, and behold, her delicate white hand was soiled and blackened, and as it chanced, her white dress also.

"We cannot be too careful in handling coal," said Eulalia in vexation.
"Yes, truly," said her father, "you see, my child, that coal, even if they do not burn, will blacken. So it is even with the company of the vicious!"

The following advertisement recently appeared in the New York Herald:
Wanted—Colored men to solicit subscriptions for a new masonic work; must be members of the craft; good compensations and steady employment.

A Western newspaper describes a pathetic scene that was enacted at one of the Milwaukee depots a few days ago. A young German, who, by four years' hard work in a brewery, had saved enough money to make a home, was waiting for his betrothed, who was to arrive from Germany. She embraced him upon her arrival, and when he tried to disengage himself, her hands were firmly clasped about his neck in death. Her heart was literally broken with joy.

Avoid temptation through fear that you may not withstand it.

INDEPENDENT.

The sorrow of all sorrows
Was never more cruel
Than the many a poor sorrow
The morning of the dawn,
And daily have I seen
In some collected thought.

The loss of youth is sad
To all who think or feel—
A wound to after glances
Can never wholly heal.
And yet, I must not weep
We learn at last to bear it.

The fading and the falling
Of friends and loved ones
For friend, for loved one,
Know what and where to fall:
But souls themselves remaining,
Have still a friend remaining!

The death of those who love us
And those we love, is sore;
But think they are above us,
Or think they are no more—
We leave the living that serve,
We cannot weep forever!

The sorrow of all sorrows
Is deeper than all these,
And all that anguish knows
Upon its bosom dwells;
No tears nor prayers relieve it,
No loving vows deceive it.

It is, one day to waken
And find that love is flown,
And cannot be overthrown,
And we are left alone;
No we that can be spoken,
No heart that can be broken.

No wish for love's returning,
Or something in its stead;
No missing it, and yearning
As for the dearer dead.
No yesterday, no morrow,
But ever-present sorrow!

THE WAY TO AVOID CALUMNY.—"If any one speaks ill of thee," said Epictetus, "consider whether he hath truth on his side; and if so reform thyself, that his censures may not affect thee." When Anaximander was told that the very boys laughed at his singing, "Ay," said he, "then I must learn to sing better." Plato being told that he had many enemies who spoke ill of him, said: "It is no matter; I will live so that none shall believe them." Hearing, at another time, that an intimate friend of his had spoken detractively of him, he said: "I am sure he would not do it if he had not some reason for it? This is the surest, as well as the noblest way of drawing the sting out of a reproach, and the true method of preparing a man for that great and only relief against the pains of calumny—a good conscience.

The world is full of men who will "boss a job" for a dollar and a half a day, when five dollars a day for actual work would not be the slightest temptation for them.

Life is made up, not of great sacrifices or duties, but of little things, in which smiles and kindness and small obligations given habitually are what win and preserve the heart and secure comfort.

THE FAVORITE HOME REMEDY.—This universal Medicine is warranted not to contain a single particle of Mercury, or any injurious mineral substance, but is PURELY VEGETABLE, containing those Southern Roots and Herbs which an all-wise Providence has placed in countries where Liver Diseases most prevail. It cures all Diseases caused by derangement of the Liver and Bile.
